

Rebels Spurn Reported Bid Of Loyalists To Surrender

Concessions for Madrid
Leaders Rejected,
Insurgents Say.

Government Musters All Physically Able Men to Capital Defense.

By the Associated Press.
Burgos, Spain, Oct. 13.—Rebel officials today declared they had rejected a bid from "several Madrid leaders" to surrender the capital in exchange for concessions.
Headquarters here issued a communique, declaring:
"The situation of our army is such that it is useless to discuss the surrender of Madrid, which must be left."

The first disclosure of the reported offer to surrender came from headquarters at Salamanca, where officers said overtures were made to submit speedily in return for favors.

Not Negotiating.
A communique issued there said the rebel command was not negotiating for surrender of the capital "in a minimum of three days" with Miguel Maura, former minister of the Madrid government.
"It is true, however," the communique added, "that several Madrid leaders tried to obtain from us certain concessions in return for rapid surrender of the Spanish capital."
Appeals to the Madrid population to capitulate and "avoid useless spilling of blood" were dropped on the capital again by airplane, the rebels announced.

2,000 Reported Killed.
Insurgent radio broadcasts both from Seville and Jerez de la Frontera said 2,000 government troops were killed at Oviedo and rescue columns were being rushed to rebels encircled by Socialist militiamen in the northern city.

The broadcasts said Senora Manuel Azana, wife of the Spanish President, and Jose Penia Giral, minister without portfolio in the cabinet of Premier Francisco Largo Caballero, had fled Spain on the Argentine cruiser 25 Mayo.
Rebel leaders at Talavera de la Reina were reported ready to launch a concerted attack on Madrid, and an insurgent column was said to have pushed close to Aranjuez, south of the capital.

All Reserves Mustered.
Madrid, Oct. 13 (AP).—The government, draining its last resources of manpower, tonight mustered into the defense reserves all men who could shoulder a rifle.
Cripples and semi-invalids, physically unfit to be drafted into forces sent to the front, were to be organized in a separate reserve unit.
Recruiting committees scattered through the city trying to shame upper strata youths into enlistment, particularly the so-called "seniority" class, which so far has taken no active part.

Steady downpours of rains driven on wintry winds enforced a lull in the fighting on both sides in the Madrid area, giving the government breathing space in which to strengthen its defenses closest to the city.

400 Girls in Riot At Smith College Political Parade

By the United Press.
Northampton, Mass., Oct. 13.—Rival student political groups at Smith College clashed on the campus tonight during a street parade preceding a rally sponsored by a local Republican organization.
Two of the estimated 400 girls who participated in the lively demonstration were reported injured.

Names of the injured were withheld.
One student said one of her teeth was knocked out. A dentist verified this statement.
Another said she was kicked in the stomach.

No arrests were made.
The demonstration occurred as the parade marched along Main street and were about to converge on John M. Green Hall, a college assembly building.

Witnesses said the clash resulted after some 150 members of the Smith College Democratic group swung in ahead of paraders among whom were an estimated 250 members of the Smith College Republican Club.

Cleveland, Oct. 13.—Police and firemen inspect ruins at Cleveland Stadium tonight after a blast injured four and endangered 200 Great Lakes Exposition employees. Damage was estimated at $25,000. The blast came in a ground floor room when James A. Cosgriff, the most seriously hurt, pulled a chain to light an overhead bulb. It is thought an electric spark ignited gases.

FTC Accuses 9 Electric Firms Of Price Pacts As Others Grew

of U. S. Charges Against Turbine Makers.

By the Associated Press.
The Federal Trade Commission yesterday accused General Electric, Westinghouse and seven other companies of entering into a price-fixing agreement, which the commission said tended to monopolize business and deprive buyers of the advantages of free competition.

Named with the companies in a complaint issued by the commission was the Heat Exchange Institute, described as a trade association with headquarters in New York. The commission said the institute was organized in 1935 to aid the corporations in making their agreement effective.

Other respondents, described as manufacturers of turbine generators or condensers or both, were: All-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., Milwaukee; Elliott Co., Jeannette, Pa.; Worthington Pump and Machinery Corporation, Harrison, N. J.; Ingersoll-Rand Co., Jersey City; Foster-Wheeler Corporation, New York; C. H. Wheeler Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia; and Ross Heater and Manufacturing Co., Buffalo.

All were given until November 13 to show cause why they should not be ordered to cease and desist from the alleged practices, which the commission said were in violation of the trade commission act.
A commission statement said the respondents "are said to constitute a group so powerful that they are able to control the turbine-generator and condenser business in the United States."

For the purpose of eliminating competition among themselves, the complaint charged, "the respondents, under their agreement, fix and maintain uniform prices as well as uniform performance guarantees for their products; adhere to pricing sheets compiled by one of their members, although such pricing sheets bear no relation to the individual capacities of the respective respondents in the manufacture of their products; submit identical bids, not only for turbine-generators and condensers but for the 'extras' necessary for their installation, and take disciplinary action against any of their group who fail to abide by the prices in accordance with their agreement."

The nine companies adopted, as their own, confidential performance data compiled by one of the group, although the data was unrelated to actual performance of their products.

$20,000 Damage Asked In Stray Bullet Death

A stray bullet that struck and killed Jean Alphonse Brown, a 19-year-old Marine, was the basis for a suit of $20,000 damages in District Court yesterday. The suit was filed by Mrs. Elizabeth L. Brown, the widow.

Yesterday, chaos in the autumn sun, the White House was serene, almost somnolent, with nothing to tell the onlooker that out in the West, two men were fighting for the honor to call it home.

Inside, veteran attaches were speculating on an old mystery: Where in the ancient mansion is the cornerstone that was laid October 13, 1792?

Ordinarily the answer to questions like that would be quickly forthcoming. It would come from the Masonic Fraternity, under whose auspices the cornerstones of the Capitol, the Monument and other great structures were laid. But in the case of the White House it is not even certain that there was a Masonic ceremony when the cornerstone was laid.

J. Claude Keiper, secretary of the Grand Lodge of the District, recalled that many men had scoured the records in vain to find a good account of the cornerstone laying. In 1911, on the occasion of the hundredth anniversary of the Grand Lodge here, Keiper said, Kenton N. Harper, historian, had this to say about the White House:

"The cornerstone of the White House was laid October 13, 1792, and while tradition holds the ceremony to have been under Masonic auspices and a number of veracious historians so affirm, the most diligent search, in which the author has had the assistance of the late A. Figures Reveal U. S. Navy Shorn To Give Refund Of AAA Taxes

Ships Scrapped by London
Treaty While Nations Made Increases.

By the Associated Press.
An official report yesterday disclosed that America's Naval fighting power had been reduced since July 1, while other major nations were increasing theirs.

The figures made public by the Navy Department showed that this country, chiefly by scrapping old warships in accordance with provisions of the soon-to-expire London treaty, had cut its naval strength from 324 ships of 1,080,715 tons to 308 ships aggregating 1,062,575 tons.

During the same period, Great Britain, which has the world's greatest navy, increased its strength from 307 ships of 1,234,329 tons to 309 of 1,232,845 tons.

The Japanese navy increased during the three months from 213 warships of 774,727 tons to 217 of 778,397 tons. French naval strength climbed from 178 vessels of 558,452 tons to 187 of 571,734 tons.

Italy added four warships, increasing her strength from 191 ships of 468,985 tons to 195 of 498,323 tons, while Germany increased its sea force from 49 warships of 113,708 tons to 53 of 125,458 tons.

The American Navy lost heavily from "depreciation." Its modern "under-age" ships decreased from 84 of 749,145 tons to 71 of 610,275 tons, due to the large number reaching the age at which, under treaty provisions, they are considered inefficient for modern war.

Other "Under-Age" Fleets.
The "under-age" fleets of other sea powers: Great Britain, 147 ships of 688,973 tons; Japan, 143 of 563,730; France, 149 of 325,750; Italy, 127 of 233,500; and Germany, 43 of 81,500.

During the three months, four American battleships passed their twentieth birthdays, leaving only eight of this country's 15 battleships in the "under-age" classification.

The tabulation showed the United States had 95 warships of 288,215 tons under construction or appropriated for by Congress. Construction under way for other powers: Great Britain, 80 ships of 336,781 tons; Japan, 34 of 93,907; France, 30 of 108,616; Italy, 34 of 109,876; and Germany, 37 of 111,500.

Miss Loring Murder Case Break Hinted

Before Prince Georges
Grand Jury Today.

Indictment Rumored in Year-Old Slaying of Bride-to-Be, 27.

A "break" in the nearly year-old murder of Corinna Loring, 27, Mount Rainier, Md., bride-to-be, was hinted last night as investigators prepared to go before the Prince Georges County grand jury in Upper Marlboro today.

Lieut. Joseph H. Itzel, ace detective loaned to the county by the Baltimore police department, arrived in Upper Marlboro yesterday. Asked if he would present any new evidence to the grand jury, Itzel replied:

"I don't say."
Itzel said he did not expect that any suspects would be indicted. There were reports, however, that an indictment was likely.

Bowie Also to Appear.
State's Attorney Alan Bowie, who has been working with Itzel in the case, also will go before the grand jury.

Corinna Loring, a quiet, well-liked stenographer, disappeared from her Mount Rainier home the night of last November 4. She was murdered that night, less than 48 hours before she was supposed to be married. The earth was rumpled and souvenir hunters had a field day.

Teas, fiancé of the murdered girl, was arrested that night. The next night police arrested Aubrey Hampton, New Deal clerk in Washington, who once had counted the pretty Loring. He made laboratory tests of Corinna's clothing, and also fashioned a plaster cast of teeth marks found on the girl's hand.

After talking to Teas and Hampton, he ordered them released.

Over Score Questioned.
Itzel questioned more than a score of men and women, including Mrs. George Loring, the girl's mother. He ran down dozens of "tips," but frankly admitted at the end of several months that a solution had eluded him.

Robert H. Hicks, part-time criminologist, also had a hunch in the case. He made laboratory tests of Corinna's clothing, and also fashioned a plaster cast of teeth marks found on the girl's hand.

On Monday evening Corinna, "terribly happy," had dinner with her mother and her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Lo-Jacono. When Teas left her well after shopping trip, he promised to call for her after he got out of night school.

After dinner, the Lo-Jaconos left the house. That was about 7:30 p. m. Now only Corinna and her mother were left. The mother left at 8 p. m. to attend church services. Corinna, attired in a house dress, was ironing clothes in preparation for her marriage.

Teas, after getting out of night school, returned home. He found Corinna in the house. She was alone. He went to her room and found her dead.

Time of Processing.
It was explained that the processing tax repayment would apply only to wheat and corn products processed by the subsidiary companies of General Mills, Inc. on and after May 1, 1935, and rye products processed on and after September 1, 1935.

The reimbursement will be made in consideration of a release of all claims on the part of customers on account of processing taxes imposed from and after July 9, 1933, under the agricultural adjustment act, it was stated.

One of the subsidiaries of General Mills involved in the action announced here was the Red Band Co., Inc., Kewanee City, Tenn.

On the day the subsidiaries were made plain that the repayments would mean nothing to the ultimate consumers of products involved. The tax, it was said, would be returned to the jobbers and whole-

Cleveland Blast Damages Stadium; Four Are Injured

By the Associated Press.
Cleveland, Oct. 13.—An explosion rocked the Cleveland Stadium tonight, injured four persons, and shook up at least 200 others who were in the $3,000,000 structure on the lake front.

James A. Cosgriff, 43, a wardrobe man for the Great Lakes Exposition, which ended last night, was most seriously hurt. The blast emanated from a storeroom on the ground level. Cosgriff was in the room.

The explosion blew off half a section of seats in the lower deck of the stadium, hurled concrete blocks 40 feet in the air and twisted steel girders.

Cosgriff told Assistant Safety Director John R. Flynn he pulled a chain to light an overhead electric bulb when the blast occurred. Officials said they believed accumulated gas had been set off.

Damage to the stadium was "at least $25,000 and maybe a great deal more," it was said.

By the Associated Press.
Kansas City, Oct. 13.—President Roosevelt cut across the home State of Gov. Landon and into Missouri tonight with declarations that he did not believe Kansas could have "pulled through" the last four years without Federal co-operation and assistance, and that the school "is the last expenditure upon which America should be willing to economize."

Mr. Roosevelt made his assertions in a spectacular day of strenuous campaigning which carried him through cheering station crowds at Wichita, Kans.; back platform visits with hundreds, including William Allen White, and an auditorium address here to massed throngs measured by thousands.

The applauding crowd which heard the President in the new $8,000,000 municipal auditorium here, partly financed by Federal funds, was estimated by H. F. McElroy, city manager, at "right at 21,000."

Appears Fatigued.
A great cheer went up as the Chief Executive stepped to the platform. He started off extemporaneously by saying he had seen a lot of things on his Western tour that "needed mending," and then quickly added the depression was "behind us." He appeared somewhat fatigued by the busy journey which began in Washington last Thursday.

Large blue and red banners dotted the circular tiers in back of Mr. Roosevelt. One read: "Roosevelt will carry Kansas."

En route from Kansas City, Kansas, where he left his train to motor over to the Missouri side, the President was driven by waving throngs for miles along the route to and from a new county courthouse in the former city.

To those banked on the steps of the courthouse, the President spoke from an automobile.

Examples of Projects.
He held up a large book and said it contained "splendid" examples of work projects in the city constructed with the help of Federal money.

The auditorium audience sent up a roar of applause when the President declared the Government had done much "in the way of beginning to improve the things in America which have made for waste in human beings." And then added: "A vast majority of the American people in 1936 are with us to see it through."

When he asserted the Federal Government had "lent a helping hand" to students in high schools and colleges and added "believe me it's worth while," a spectator shouted:

"Put it on 'em; you're right!"
In the "dark days" of which we are now coming," the President said American youth apparently had reached "the end of the road."

Praises CCC Plan.
He said that before his Administration tackled any other problem it "set up the CCC camp to put an immediate end to that hopeless condition."

The President closed with this appeal to the young people of America: "Join with us; ours is the real stake to continue the American democracy in America."

Police and National Guardsmen with rifles were stationed every

Accused Cleric Defends Firing Of British School for Bombers

By the Associated Press.
Carnarvon, Wales, Oct. 13.—A four Welsh pastor today testified he and two other Welsh nationalists were justified in burning buildings of a British bombing school because:

"The English government's behavior in the matter of the bombing school is exactly the behavior of the new anti-Christ throughout Europe."

Charged with malicious destruction of the King's property, the preacher—the Rev. Lewis Valentine—gravelly insisted in court that his actions had been motivated by his "responsibility for the Kingdom of God in Wales."

The jury deliberated 40 minutes and then announced a disagreement. Valentine and his codefendants—John Saunders Lewis, scholar, and D. J. Williams, school teacher—were held for trial at the next assizes.

Coughlin vs. Barry

Threat to 'Get'
Globe Reporter

I'll Tear Him to Pieces, Says Radio Priest, Enraged at Scribe.

By the Associated Press.
Boston, Oct. 13.—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin today said he was waiting over in Boston "to get a reporter" who, he claimed, interfered with a meeting between himself and Rhode Island officials of his organization.

The reporter—John J. Barry, of Boston—denying he had attempted to interfere with the meeting, said he would be "glad" to meet the priest.

Highly excited when he returned here from Providence, where the incident occurred, Father Coughlin paced the floor of his hotel suite and called Barry an "interloper."

"I was just down there talking to my own people," the priest said. "I told the reporters that that was what I was. Just the same I have a news story. But I'm not going to give it to them."

He pulled a paper from his hip pocket, waved it and shoved it back. "No, I won't give it to them now," he said. "If I see that fellow, I'll tear him to pieces."

Barry, reached in Providence, said he was standing in a hotel corridor with other newspaper men waiting for the priest to leave the meeting. When the meeting broke up Barry said Coughlin appeared with an escort of Boston detectives.

The priest left his party, the newspapermen said, "snatched my glasses from my face, stepped against me, pushing me against the wall. It was very unexpected."

Barry attributed Coughlin's actions to an interview which occurred earlier in Boston, when Barry said he questioned him closely. Told of Coughlin's threat to "get him," Barry laughed and said he would be glad to meet him.

The radio priest would not amplify the incident, declaring: "I'm going to save that for my radio speech next Sunday night and I'll tell it all."

Tonight Coughlin, at a press conference, denounced as a "gangster story" an account of his assertion of this intention, adding that "cultured people don't stoop to 'getting' people."

"The only thing I have done," he said, "is to remonstrate with this gentleman's superiors."

"Has the matter been adjusted satisfactorily?" he was asked. "I am not going to discuss that," was his reply.

Barry, a veteran member of the Boston Globe staff, has covered political figures and rallies for his paper for several years.

Although the meeting of Coughlin with Rhode Island Union Party leaders was private, the rumor here was that the priest had been "seen" by the press.

'Menace' Is Major Issue,
G. O. P. Leader Says
in Detroit Talk.

Nominee Attacks
'Too Much Power'

Demands Opponent Tell of Plans to Amend Constitution.

Text of Gov. Landon's address—Page 10.

By the Associated Press.
Detroit, Oct. 13.—Gov. Alf M. Landon termed the New Deal a "threat" to the American form of government tonight in calling upon President Roosevelt "to tell us before election day" what constitutional amendments "he has in mind."

"By his silence," the President's nominee said, "he is attempting to dodge the fundamental issue of campaign—the issue of whether he intends to change the form of government—whether labor, agriculture and business are to be directed and managed by Government—directed and managed by politicians."

Third Major Address.
The Republican candidate pledged, if elected, to "recommend to Congress the repeal of all acts giving automatic powers to the Chief Executive." Should he find new Federal powers needed, Landon said, "I shall favor Congress going to the people openly and ask for such powers through a constitutional amendment."

Standing in cold, breeze-swept Mavin Field, the Kansas Governor said that while not condemning requests for new powers when they seem necessary, "I do condemn efforts to obtain powers by devious methods without the people's consent."

In the third major address of his late-State campaign swing, Landon announced abruptly at the outset that "I am going to discuss the threat of the present Administration to our American form of government."

"Make no mistake about it," he told his outdoor audience and the Nation over the radio, "this threat to our form of government is a matter for which the people are at time to bring it out into the open."

Saying that "human liberties" were falling in the world and ideals of democracy "swept away," the Governor said that in "the process of destruction" executive power mounts during the campaign, the legislature become a "mere instrument of the executive" and finally "the courts of law are undermined."

"When the final stage is reached," he continued, "when the independence of the courts is destroyed, the rights and liberties of the people are gone. The people then are at the mercy of the executive. The executive is all powerful."

"We have seen the results of this process abroad. The first steps have already been taken here."

Gov. Landon spent this afternoon with Henry Ford.

They lunched together. They appeared together briefly on a platform at a luncheon of Republican women.

They were then leaving the hotel for Ford's Dearborn home. Gov. Landon waved, smiled and called a "hello" to the group of women in the dining room. Ford, who had followed him to the small platform at one side of the room, did not speak.

Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co., was with the party.

Makes Brief Stops.
Henry Ford was waiting in the hotel suite when Gov. Landon arrived, after a trip from Cleveland that included brief stops at Sandusky and Toledo, Ohio, and Monroe and Wyandotte, Mich.

A guard, not recognizing the manufacturer, held out an arm to bar his entrance with a "wait a minute." A fellow guard interposed: "He's all right." The arm dropped as the owner smiled and said, "pardon me, Mr. Ford, I guess I've seen you before." Ford returned the smile and entered the suite.

Edsel Ford, William J. Cameron, of the Ford Co., and Howard C. Lawrence, chairman of the Michigan Automobile Dealers Association, were with him.

Jones Appeals For Revisions In Earning Tax

RFC Head Claims Roosevelt Is Willing to Have Measure Reopened.

Important modifications in the Administration's new undistributed corporate earnings tax, target of mounting complaints from business, last night were recommended by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, in the first of a series of campaign radio speeches on the Government and business.

Urging tax revision especially to encourage business plant replacement, rebuilding and modernization of all types, Jones intimated he had the backing of the President and said:

"I have every confidence the President will be entirely willing to have Congress review this measure, especially if it can be shown that there are inequities, or that any provision in the act retards capital expenditures."

Courts Business Vote.

Courting the business vote for the New Deal ticket, Jones, head of what he called "the biggest and most varied business and banking enterprise in the history of the world," and himself a business man and banker in private life, spoke on "The Roosevelt Administration, Its Effect Upon and Relationship to Business."

Significance was lent to his call for revision of the undistributed earnings tax, in view of Gov. Alf M. Landon's demand at Buffalo for repeal of the law. Gov. Landon called it "the most cockeyed piece of tax legislation ever proposed in a modern country."

The tax recently was assailed by the United States Chamber of Commerce in its periodical review as to its "destructive effects on recovery and reemployment." The review called on business executives to send it confidential reports on concrete examples of the law's results.

Jones' speech was the first indication from any Administration quarter that modification of the tax is being considered. When Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau recently announced a Congressional study toward general tax revision he advised reporters that he was satisfied with the framework of the undistributed earnings levy.

Chairman Fought Act.

The RFC chairman, who fully recommended exemptions for plant modernization when the law was before Congress, said last night:

"I sincerely hope Congress will review and modify in some respects the 1936 revenue act when it meets in January."

He added that if business enterprises are permitted to accumulate reasonable reserves to carry them through periods of depression or slack business, and provisions are made that will enable them to get out of debt, and modifications made that will encourage and permit capital expenditures, "the principle of taxing undistributed corporate net income is entitled to a fair trial."

Business interests have complained that reasonable depression reserves cannot be built up under the law, and that a premium is placed on companies getting out of debt, but primarily they have battled that "up to the present act these distributed corporate income."

Cites Previous Attempts.

Jones argued last night that the tax principle was "not a new idea," that several legislative attempts have been made to force distribution of large surpluses, but admitted that "up to the present act these attempts have failed," and pointed out:

"Business is so much better now than when this act was passed, that our national revenue is substantially greater than was estimated, and some modifications can probably be made without unduly affecting Treasury receipts, or delaying Treasury plans for balancing the budget."

"Especially I would like to see an amendment to this act that would encourage expenditures for modernization of all character; for replacement of plant, machinery and equipment; for rebuilding; and one that would make some further provision for institutions laboring under debt."

He said taxes "always seem high."

Politics and People

Landon Touched on Vulnerable Spot of New Deal in His Speech on Relief Problem.

By Franklyn Waltman

IN his Cleveland speech on Federal relief, Gov. Alf M. Landon found one of the most vulnerable spots in the New Deal armor, second in its vulnerability only to its nonchalant monetary experimentation. The Administration has commenced to liquidate the latter follies—but as for its relief program, it stands unrepentant, if not exultantly defiant.

Unemployment and relief problems remain the sorest affliction of the Nation, even though so great has been the measure of recovery that Federal Reserve attaches assert that they are now more concerned about steps to prevent an unhealthy boom than in starting one. But there can be no lasting recovery until the unemployment problem is solved—and once it is solved the other issues of the day, except that of world peace, shall become inconsequential and trivial.

All this seems to be axiomatic and yet as Gov. Landon asserted at Cleveland the Administration, with millions of dollars to waste on all kinds of silly projects, has not believed it worthwhile to ascertain exactly the limits of the unemployment and relief problem. Indeed, you are regarded by New Dealers as unpatriotic, as one who desires to see people starve or, even, as too dumb to understand if you raise the kind of inquiries projected by Gov. Landon.

The New Deal, as Gov. Landon well said, has used "relief as an experimental playground for every foolish fad and pet theory that came along," and he demonstrated the truth of his contention by reciting the constantly changing policies of the last three and one-half years.

Despite the gains made in employment, evidenced by every statistical reporting agency in the country; despite the need for skilled workmen in some industries; despite the rise in national income over which the President exults daily—even though he exaggerates it—the fact remains that relief and recovery expenditures either remain stationary or soar; the fact remains that the Treasury paid out more for direct relief in the first three months of this fiscal year than in the same period of the last fiscal year.

And the future—President Roosevelt in his Pittsburgh speech on the budget did not utter a single word which would indicate he had any hope or anticipation that these expenditures would be reduced. Indeed, his latest budget message indicated that more money would be needed for relief purposes in this fiscal year than has already been appropriated.

Harry L. Hopkins, the relief administrator, in his new book, "Spending to Save," which makes its appearance today, assumes the role of a prophet of gloom and despair. In his usual muddled thinking he claims the present system in this country is capable of giving to all workers those things which are now the expectation of a comparative few, that is, travel, vacations, automobiles, radios and college education, and then he makes this statement:

"Until the time comes, if it ever does, when industry and business can absorb all able-bodied workers—and that time seems to grow more distant with improvements in management and technology—we shall have with us large numbers of unemployed."

What a wall of despair! And of misunderstanding! If this country's economic system is capable of bringing better homes, better food, travel, vacation, college education, automobiles and radios within the reach of the great mass of workers, as Mr. Hopkins asserts, then this system is capable of giving work to every person willing and able to work.

Mr. Hopkins' prophecy of despair is an old theme with him. He frequently has uttered it in private, contending that technological advances doom millions of youths and children yet unborn to the prospect of being unable to find employment except as wards of the Government. It is a thesis that is without historical foundation.

The industrial age really reached its first full bloom in 1870 and the mechanization of industry in this country has been going forward ever since that date—to an even greater extent during the first part of this century than it is today. If the Hopkins thesis were true, then there would have been fewer employment opportunities in 1930 than in 1870. What are the facts?

Between 1870 and 1930 the country's population increased 21.8 per cent and those engaged in gainful occupations increased 290.5 per cent. In 1870, 32.4 per cent of the population was engaged in gainful occupations. In 1930, 39.8 per cent was so engaged. During this period, the National Industrial Conference Board in a recent study said, "there has been an increase in employment opportunities, a decrease in the working hours, a reduction of working hours, a lightening of the tasks of labor, an improvement of efficiency in production, an extension of the span of life, and an enormous increase in production relative to the growth of population—all of which has contributed to a rise in the general standards of living."

Perhaps the relief and unemployment problem will never be solved if left in the hands of persons who proclaim it a permanent problem. But there are many capable men who believe with Gov. Landon that it need only be a temporary problem—and one that has waited too long to be solved.

despair. In his usual muddled thinking he claims the present system in this country is capable of giving to all workers those things which are now the expectation of a comparative few, that is, travel, vacations, automobiles, radios and college education, and then he makes this statement:

"Until the time comes, if it ever does, when industry and business can absorb all able-bodied workers—and that time seems to grow more distant with improvements in management and technology—we shall have with us large numbers of unemployed."

What a wall of despair! And of misunderstanding! If this country's economic system is capable of bringing better homes, better food, travel, vacation, college education, automobiles and radios within the reach of the great mass of workers, as Mr. Hopkins asserts, then this system is capable of giving work to every person willing and able to work.

Mr. Hopkins' prophecy of despair is an old theme with him. He frequently has uttered it in private, contending that technological advances doom millions of youths and children yet unborn to the prospect of being unable to find employment except as wards of the Government. It is a thesis that is without historical foundation.

The industrial age really reached its first full bloom in 1870 and the mechanization of industry in this country has been going forward ever since that date—to an even greater extent during the first part of this century than it is today. If the Hopkins thesis were true, then there would have been fewer employment opportunities in 1930 than in 1870. What are the facts?

Between 1870 and 1930 the country's population increased 21.8 per cent and those engaged in gainful occupations increased 290.5 per cent. Hopkins Fears Standing Army Of Unemployed

WPA Head Defends Set Up; New Book Attacks Hoover Tactics.

For years to come there will be a "standing army" of unemployed—able-bodied men for whom the Government will be responsible—Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administration director, says in a book, "Spending to Save," which will be published today. He wrote:

"To me, the only possible solution for those who can not be absorbed by long-time or large-scale public works is a work program."

Much of Hopkins' book is a defense of the work program as contrasted with direct cash relief or other forms of dole. He argues throughout against administration of relief by local agencies and for centralization in the Federal Government.

Half of the Hopkins book is taken up with a recital of the relief attempts of the Hoover Administration. The second half is a recital of the history of relief under the New Deal, describing how $6,000,000,000 has been spent through FERA, CWA, WPA and other relief agencies.

The book is an impassioned chronicle of events as Hopkins sees them. It contains little of the customary Hopkins invective, sarcasm or wise-cracking.

Used Gifford Files.

Much of the material in the section relating to the Hoover Administration is new. Hopkins evidently had access to the files of the Gifford committee and other Hoover relief organizations, and he draws upon them freely, always endeavoring to make out a case unfavorable to the previous Administration.

In answering criticisms of his own administration, Hopkins declared that it is most glaring deficiency never is pointed out, and says: "We have never given adequate relief."

Hopkins tells how in the early days of the depression every effort was made to avoid arousing the country. He says that it was not until August, 1931, that the Hoover Administration "accepted the word unemployment in its vocabulary," and adds:

"The Federal Government, in the Administration of President Hoover, steadfastly refused to assist the states and municipalities which were so rapidly exhausting all of their resources in the effort to take care of their destitute population. President Hoover and his associates feared national responsibility more than they feared national unemployment, and they persistently preferred to permit the municipalities, the rural communities and the States to fall down in their efforts to take care of their unemployed adequately rather than to admit Federal responsibility for a national problem."

Complaints Cited.

Hopkins quotes numerous letters from officials and businessmen to Hoover relief organizations urging against Federal relief. The relief administrator says:

"Thousands of men and women were questioning the value of a political system, which did not take care of its unemployed when industry could not do so. Hopkins devotes considerable space to showing that local communities and private charities were financially unable to take care of their needy unemployed."

The commissary, Hopkins says, is undoubtedly the cheapest form of relief, but adds that he believes it to be the most degrading. Giving of outright cash, he says, "is by all odds the best form of relief except work."

Hopkins makes much of the theory that work relief maintains the self-respect of the relief client.

The Campaign Arena

New York, Oct. 13 (AP)—The odds on President Roosevelt to be re-elected were quoted at 12 to 5 tonight by Wall Street commission. A month ago the odds were 8 to 5 that he would defeat Gov. Alf M. Landon, and a week ago they were 5 to 1.

Commissioners said Mr. Roosevelt was a 6 to 5 favorite to carry New York. The betting on Pennsylvania is even money. Odds on Mr. Roosevelt to win California are 2 to 1.

Wall Street men said the actual amount of money wagered on this election was the smallest for any recent campaign. They attributed that to a lack of Landon money.

Boston, Oct. 13 (AP)—Gov. James M. Curley, Democratic nominee for the United States Senate, began his final three weeks' campaign today expressing confidence of election, despite the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin's opposition.

Coughlin is supporting Thomas O'Brien, Union Party candidate for Vice President, and independent candidate for the Senate from Massachusetts.

Father Coughlin asserted in an interview that Gov. Curley had telephoned him several times in an effort to have O'Brien withdraw from the race.

"I'll defeat O'Brien by 400,000 votes, but the situation may mean the election of Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., Republican candidate," the radio priest quoted Curley as saying.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes said yesterday that "as a conservationist" Gov. Landon "is a good conversationalist."

Talking at his press conference about Landon's conservation speech at Columbus last week, Ickes asked "why doesn't he talk about conservation of oil?"

Presumably Gov. Landon knows something about conservation of oil, Ickes said, "but he doesn't believe in it. He wants State oil compact and anyone who knows anything about conservation knows it can't be done on a State basis."

He termed Landon's conservation program as "just a broad, general statement that means nothing at all."

Mena, Ark., Oct. 13 (AP)—Edward Richards, national campaign speaker for the Communist Party, and Arley Woodrow, Mena attorney and Communist candidate for Lieutenant Governor, joined today in denouncing as "a flagrant violation of civil liberties" the issuance of an injunction prohibiting them from speaking here.

County Judge H. I. Parker issued the order, declaring: "They are Communists against our country. They undertake to use our court house without permission from me or anyone else. I anticipated there would be trouble."

The speakers were to appear at Cornwell College, which today protested the action.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 13 (AP)—Carl H. Cook, Iowa Republican chairman, telegraphed Secretary of the Interior Ickes today demanding that the Secretary retract what Cook said was his statement that the Republican Party financed Father Charles E. Coughlin's speech in Des Moines last month.

"This is untrue and you know it is untrue by the report made to you by your own investigating committee," he said.

"I call upon you to do the manly thing by retracting your malicious and untrue statement."

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 13 (AP)—Col. P. D. Shingleton, of the State Police, has turned down a request for troops to attend a meeting to be addressed by Senator Rush D. Holt Friday night at Clarksburg.

He said the law bars attendance of State troopers at political gatherings.

Shingleton's statement came after Mayor Fred T. Wilson of Fairmont told the superintendent troopers should have been assigned to a meeting there last Monday night at which hecklers prevented Holt from speaking.

Lewis Ignores Peace Move; Council Seeks to Avert West Coast Strike.

Little hope of settlement of the differences that have split organized labor into two camps was seen yesterday, as the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization marked time. John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., declined to make any comment on the peace move of the federation executive council.

Meanwhile, the Federal Maritime Commission moved to "use to the fullest extent its power and authority, both legal and moral" to prevent a strike of West Coast water front workers. Pending an investigation, the commission appealed to both ship owners and workers to continue operating under present agreements.

The federation council turned from consideration of attempts to bring about peace within organized labor into attempts to settle the American Newspaper Guild strike against the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Representatives of employers and workers were heard in regard to the newspaper walkout. Consideration of this strike will be resumed today.

The offer of the executive council of the federation to meet, through a committee, with representatives of the C. I. O. was on its way to Max Zartsky, president of the Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers, whose organization suggested the move.

Lewis was not sent a copy of the offer and it was not expected he would make any move until he hears from Zartsky.

Green delayed until today appointment of the committee which will seek to meet with the C. I. O. representatives. Previous statements by Lewis have indicated he would consent to no such meeting unless the federation council first agrees to rescind the suspension of ten unions belonging to the C. I. O.

The council has given no indication that it would be willing to do this.

Or more immediate concern was the threatened West Coast longshoremen's strike. The newly formed maritime commission announced it would make an immediate investigation to determine the merits of the dispute.

Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, of the Coast Guard, who is expected to become a member of the commission, was sent to San Francisco to take charge of the investigation. Edward F. McGrady, assistant Secretary of Labor, already is on the Coast on a similar mission.

The Maritime Commission in a statement pointed out that the first obligation of both employers and workers is to the public.

While Coughlin was in Providence, Gov. James M. Curley of Massachusetts was defending his position in reply to the radio priest's criticism of him at yesterday's rally. The Governor insisted he had expounded all of the 16 points in the Social Justice platform more than two decades ago with the exception of the fiduciary issue.

The Bay State chief executive declined, however, to recede from his position in support of President Roosevelt—a stand which has caused Coughlin to oppose the Curley candidacy for the United States Senate.

Coughlin remained in seclusion in his hotel room all morning, declining to see anyone.

N.C. Democrats Asked by Knox To Back G. O. P.

Nominee Calls New Deal 'Government by Guess' in Asheville Talk.

By the Associated Press.
Asheville, N. C., Oct. 13.—Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, wound up his Southern penetration tonight by telling North Carolina that a Democratic vote this year is one for "more boondoggling" and "Government by guess."

The Chicago publisher's appearance in Asheville was a bid for the 13 electoral votes of a State which has gone Republican only once since the Civil War—when former President Herbert Hoover carried North Carolina in 1928 against Alfred E. Smith.

Knox declared earlier, however, in an interview aboard his campaign train, that there is a "real revolt" in the State against the betrayal of Democratic principles by the present Administration. He predicted that the electoral vote in November would be cast for his running mate, Gov. Alf M. Landon, and declared, too, that the fall election would seat "several Republican Congressmen from North Carolina."

All of North Carolina's eleven Congressmen now are Democrats. The Republican Party is progressing in the State, Knox asserted, because "it is the best party to promote the growth of North Carolina's relatively new industrial character."

"Nowhere has the New Deal's lack of understanding of the issues and of public opinion been better appreciated," he said, "than in North Carolina, where industry is making such rapid strides."

Headed for Kentucky.

Knox came to Asheville at the end of a day's tour of North Carolina cities, closing a two-day campaign for the Democratic votes of the so-called "Solid South." He first invaded the South on Monday, when he spoke in Virginia.

Tomorrow he will swing into one of the "border States," Kentucky, for a brief address in Louisville, while en route to Indiana and Illinois.

Standing in the southernmost point of his coast-to-coast campaign tonight, Knox said in the address he prepared for delivery in Asheville that "when you vote for the present Administration you are not voting the Democratic ticket."

"I would not accuse the Democratic Party of responsibility for the present Administration," he said. "That would be a slander on the party of Thomas Jefferson and Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson and Carter Glass."

Then the nominee outlined what he said the Republican Party offered voters in traditionally Democratic territory.

"It does not promise a new deal," he said. "One New Deal is enough for this country for 50 years. It promises a fair deal, no more, no less."

Will Eliminate Waste.

"It is not going to squander the taxpayer's money. It believes that relief and party politics are poor things to tie together. It is going to head hard in the direction of a balanced budget. This means a violent reversal of gears."

"If you want a government of this kind, you will have to vote the Republican ticket. But . . . it is not a party question."

"When you vote for the present Administration, you are voting for more boondoggling for government by guess. . . . The Administration does not represent the principles of the Democratic Party. It has outraged every principle for which the Democratic Party always has stood."

North Carolina has the materials, he said, to build "a great industrial empire," but, he continued, "you cannot build it under a Government that restricts production, that throttles free enterprise."

"It is widely believed," Knox went on, "that the re-election of the present Administration would mean another NRA, more dictatorial, more oppressive than before. I do not know. You do not know. That is the point of the matter."

Tydings to Speak At Rally Tonight

South Trimble, clerk of the House, will address the Kentucky Democratic Club in Columbia Theater today at 7:30 p. m., and then the meeting will adjourn to participate in the Mayflower rally.

Meanwhile, J. E. Burke, director of the Roosevelt University Club of the District, yesterday announced applications for membership in the George Washington University chapter have increased. Handy Photograph of Capital 50 Years Ago Recalls Horse and Buggy Days to General Washington in the "Gay Nineties." Horse and buggy days along the jungle that is now the Tidal Basin.

Five-cent fares on cable cars with six tickets for a quarter. Pennsylvania avenue paved with wooden blocks and rain streaming in rivulets through the cobblestones of Georgetown. Lawmakers on friendly terms with the District and residents with a reciprocal feeling for the lawmakers.

Those and other memories were recalled yesterday by Brig. Gen. George C. Shaw, U. S. A., retired, as he looked at the reproduction of an old Handy photo in his hand.

The photograph—reproduced in last Sunday's Post—was made about a half-century ago by L. C. Handy who had lugged his long-lens camera to the top of Washington Monument. Graphically it depicts the character of midtown northwest Washington with the old Van Ness mansion—now the Pan American Building—in the foreground.

"I came here from Detroit in 1890 on a Geological Survey job for the Government," the retired Army officer said yesterday. "Somewhat of an athlete, I joined the Columbia Athletic Club, which at that time had a club house on G street of Seventeenth, now a part of the Y. M. C. A. Building."

Athletics Was Vogue.

Athletics was the vogue then, according to the general. Out in Detroit John Owens had electrified the Nation, running the 100 yards under 10 seconds. Everybody was trying to emulate him and the youthful Shaw was not an exception.

"The athletic club rented the Van Ness property and built an athletic field there," the general explained pointing out the landmark in The Post reproduction in his hand. "That included a quarter-mile track shown in this picture in front of the mansion, which was itself used as a clubhouse."

"I remember in June, 1897, the Columbia Club held a big field meet there and among other events was a 10-mile cross-country run. There were about ten in the race including a young man named Stewart from the Central High School, one of the Tausig boys—I don't remember which one, Joe or Hawley (Joe is now Rear Admiral, U. S. N.)—and myself."

"As for the course—well, we started at the mansion and coursed twice around the running track, coming out on Seventeenth street. We took to the west side of the Monument lot."

tape. A fair distance man, I was no sprinter though, and Stewart beat me by a short foot at the finish.

"It was a great race—one that I'll never forget. We were clocked about an hour for the distance. The club gave us two cups of white metal, not even silver plated. I still have mine and the memory."

Other memories the general recalled. Memories of a Washington that numbered only 100,000 souls. Memories of cycle rides over gravel roads, of straw strewn in damp cable-car floors, of swamp land now reclaimed.

"When they were excavating the site of the present Commerce Building," he said, "they were surprised to come upon water. That was the old Tiber Creek of my day."

"Washington had scarcely its growing pains then. Great wastes of land bordered Florida avenue and there were only a few houses over Connecticut Bridge. Do not get the impression that it was not pretty, for I loved the greenery and swaying trees."

The now retired Army officer left the Capital in '98 with the First District of Columbia Regiment for the Cuban front. He was under fire at Santiago, was mustered out in '99 and enlisted in the regulars in 1901. Later he saw service in the Philippines.

Was there any ill feeling then between the District and Congress? Shaw was asked.

"None," he replied.

Crossing the Potomac River on the old Long Bridge where now the Highway Bridge stands we cut through Jackson City on the Virginia side of the river to Four Mile Run on the Alexandria road. We returned then over the same route and finished with two laps of the track.

Hack Used As Ambulance.

"In this particular race, however, we kept pretty well together but we started to string out on the way back. By the time we reached the Long Bridge on the return trip, Stewart, Tausig and myself were well out in front. Tausig was falling though and at the bridge he collapsed and was loaded into a hack which was following for such emergencies. (There were no autos then, the general twinklingly commented.)

"Well, the finish was pretty close," the still fresh-faced Shaw said as his mind raced in spirit over the years. "I closed up on Stewart, who had taken the lead, and we entered the Athletic Field side by side. Halfway around the last lap I jumped ahead and with a pounding heart sprinted for the

France Ignores Reich's Protest On Hitler 'Slur'

Government Holds Remarks of Red Speaker Not Its Concern.

By the United Press.

Paris, Oct. 13.—The French government has decided to refuse to admit the validity of the German protest against the Communist "insult" to Chancellor Adolf Hitler at Strasbourg last Sunday, the United Press was informed tonight.

What the German press termed "an unparalleled insult to the head of the German state" is no concern of the French government, the United Press was told. Therefore, France will refuse either to recognize Germany's official protest or undertake any steps against the Communist Party as a result.

The remarks which aroused Germany's ire were made by M. Thorez, secretary of the Communist Party. The German press demanded a vigorous protest and yesterday the German charge d'affaires in Paris was so instructed.

The principal German objections were understood to be to Thorez reproaching the government of Premier Leon Blum for "capitalizing" on demands of Hitler's agents, and allegedly for distorting Hitler's speech on winter relief in Germany. Violent objection also was made to a huge caricature of Hitler, hung behind the speaker's tribune at Strasbourg, depicting Hitler with a dagger in his mouth, with a background of cannon and bayonets.

The violence of the German press attack, the importance given the Communist meeting on the frontier and the publicity given the German protest were characterized tonight by diplomatic quarters as designed for some particular purpose—perhaps as groundwork for momentous announcements which it has been hinted may come from the meeting of Hitler and his party chiefs at his Berchtesgaden, Bavaria, home last night.

The French Communist Party announced that "following intolerable intrusion of Hitler in the internal life of France and in response to the violent attack of the German press" it would publish the full text of Thorez's Strasbourg speech, adding that it will be evidence "in which Hitler spoke in insulting terms of our people and proclaimed the necessity of isolating France in order to annihilate it."

U. S. Doctor to Treat Rich Sleepless Indian

Calcutta, Oct. 13 (AP).—Dr. F. J. Mulhens, described as an American physician from Los Angeles, arrived today to treat a sleepless Indian millionaire who has had only 20 minutes' natural rest in almost three years.

The patient, Rai Bahadur Ramdas Bajoria, has offered $50,000 for temporary relief and $100,000 for a permanent cure.

Dr. Mulhens took over the case after treatment with a British massaging machine had failed to improve the man's condition.

Geese in Niagara River Die in Horseshoe Falls

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Oct. 13 (AP).—Acting Chief of Police H. A. Collins, of the Niagara Falls Reservation, reported today that a large flock of wild geese, flying southward, had stopped to rest today in the treacherous Niagara River and a few of them had been carried to death over the Horseshoe Falls.

Collins said a State game protector had begun an investigation to determine whether the large flock still on the river was in danger. Last year a flock estimated to number 5,000 rested in the same place and several geese were carried over the falls. Rivermen estimated that the flock consisted of at least 1,000.

Toledo Votes to Study Black Legion Activities

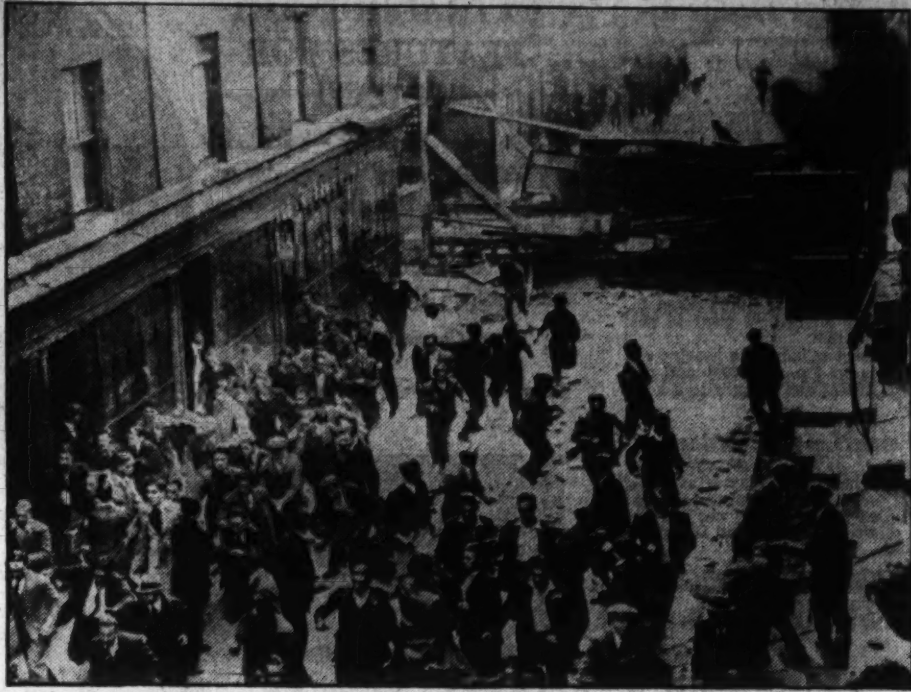

Toledo, Oct. 13 (AP).—City councilmen today unanimously adopted a resolution for appointment of a special committee to investigate the Black Legion activities in Toledo.

Merle D. Unkle, former Toledo detective, now chief of police of Mansfield, Ohio, arrived here today to head the investigation, as it affects the police department and other city bureaus.

Vegetables May Run Auto.

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 13 (AP).—Alcohol from sweet potatoes, artichokes and sugar cane may propel the automobile of the future, Dr. Charles H. Herty, director of the Pulp and Paper Laboratory at Savannah, Ga., said today. The Nation's supply of petroleum is fast disappearing, he told the South-eastern Planning Conference, while products adaptable to this region have been found efficient in production of a gasoline substitute.

London Rioters Elude Charging Police

Communists clenching clubs and other missiles beat a hasty retreat down a side street of London's East End as police charged a barricade they threw up in attempts to prevent a parade of a Fascist organization. More than 200 persons were injured during the disorders.

Peiping Educators Call Halt on Japan

Peiping (Wednesday), Oct. 14 (AP).—A new crisis in Chinese-Japanese relations arose today when 77 leading Peiping educators made public a vigorous anti-Japanese manifesto. The document urges abolition of the important Tangku Treaty and its annex, the Ho-Umedu agreement, under terms of which Japanese economic and military penetration of north China now is being carried out.

It demands a cessation of all "illegal military activities in north China" and the "halting of alien interference in Chinese internal affairs."

Japanese military commanders immediately protested the manifesto, describing it as an open challenge for settlement of Chinese-Japanese differences "by force of arms."

The manifesto was circulated throughout Peiping for additional signatures before it is sent to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in Nanking.

'Talkies' for Churches Are Forecast by Bishop

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP).—Equipment of the clergyman of the future will include sound motion picture machines and television apparatus as well as Bibles and hymnals, the Right Rev. Henry W. Hobson, Protestant Episcopal bishop of Cincinnati, predicted today.

The church must keep pace with modern scientific discoveries," he said in a report prepared for the House of Bishops of the Episcopal Church in the United States.

Bishop Hobson said arrangements already were under way for making talking pictures for use in Episcopal churches. They would distribute to smaller churches and missionary areas, he said, talks by noted church leaders.

End of Church Feared.

Kansas City, Oct. 13 (AP).—An "appalling" decline in the number of county churches is threatening existence of the entire denomination of the Disciples of Christ, the church convention was told here today.

Churchmen Study Peace Parley Plea

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP).—Representatives of two great denominations today moved to throw the weight of their influence behind the movement to preserve world peace. A resolution, petitioning President Roosevelt to call an international peace conference of nations signatory to the Kellogg-Briand peace pact was introduced at the meeting of the House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

The suggestion was advanced before the assembly of prelates from all sections of the Nation by the Right Rev. Chauncey Brewster, Bishop of Maine, as a step to stave off the menace of armed conflict. Simultaneously, 14 ministers and laymen converged on the First Methodist Church in the same suburb for the opening tomorrow of the annual convocation of the General Conference Commission on World Peace of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The principal action before them, said a spokesman, was election of a full time secretary to direct peace efforts.

Russia Enters Second Protest Over Rebel Aid

New Note Asks Neutrality Group to Meet Soon to Study Charges.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 13.—Molotov, Russian representative, tonight presented a second protest of the Spanish nonintervention committee.

The note asked that the committee be reconvened at the earliest possible date to consider again Russian protests that Germany, Italy and Portugal aided the Spanish insurgents in direct violation of the neutrality pact.

The new note, which was not circulated among members of the committee, was authoritatively understood to present concrete proposals designed to prevent future violations of the agreement.

It was recalled that the official communiqué issued after last week's committee meeting on the Russian charges said, "in view of the fact that no concrete proposals were before the committee on this occasion, no action could be taken on the statement made by the Russian representative."

During the last week-end informed sources expressed belief that M. Kagan would return to Moscow unless the neutrality committee met again to adopt specific barriers to foreign intervention in Spain.

At the time of the original note, it was said in Moscow authoritatively that Russia did not intend to renounce the pact unless foreign aid continued to the insurgents without the neutrality committee taking further steps.

Massachusetts Chef Is Jailed In 'Leg' Murder

Held in Default of High Bail After Bags Are Found in Home.

By the Associated Press.
Weymouth, Mass., Oct. 13.—Oscar Bartolini, 50-year-old chef and handyman, held as a material witness in the investigation of the slaying of pretty Grace Asquith, was committed in default of $50,000 bail today.

Following his court appearance in nearby Quincy, Bartolini was taken to Dedham Jail.

The legs of the 40-year-old photographer's model were found floating in Boston Harbor a week ago last Monday, and police are searching for the head and torso.

Assistant District Attorney George Arbuckle said Bartolini "is not under arrest, but the evidence of the Government now has warrants asking high bail."

Bartolini was a frequent visitor to Mrs. Asquith's summer cottage here and early in the investigation told police he was one of the last to see her here. Detectives said yesterday they had found in his home burlap sacks similar to that in which the legs were found.

Two Detectives Leave.

John F. Stokes, captain of State police detectives, declined to disclose his plans to locate other parts of Mrs. Asquith's body, but two detectives left this morning on an undisclosed mission.

Police Chief Edward F. Butler of this town obtained from the court in Quincy a John Doe warrant for the murder of Grace Asquith. Fingerprints found in the widow's blood-spattered cottage here "positively" established her identity as the Boston Harbor sack victim, police said.

Bartolini's answers to questions, shot at him over a period of several days, were "contradictory," the district attorney claimed.

Bags Found in House.

The district attorney's announcement followed by a few hours State Detective John Dempsey's report he had found several burlap bags bearing the stamp "Maine potatoes" and a stained automobile seat in Bartolini's house.

One of Mrs. Asquith's legs was found wrapped in burlap with such a stamp. The automobile seat was taken to Boston to determine if the stains were blood.

Meanwhile, State detectives pushed their search for John A. Lyons, a friend of Mrs. Asquith. Dewing said he had learned that Lyons, a Boston salesman and former war-time aviator, had been seen in Boston within the last few days.

The district attorney said he expected to receive fingerprints of Lyons today from the Veterans Bureau in Washington and they would be compared with those found in Mrs. Asquith's cottage.

Wife Asks Divorce From Harry Curtis

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP).—Mrs. Beatrice Curtis, 35, of Chicago, filed a suit in superior court today for divorce against Harry K. Curtis, of Washington, son of the late Vice President, Charles Curtis.

The bill charged Curtis deserted his wife February 10, 1934. Their marriage, in Washington, November 3, 1923, was a social event at the Capital. At the time Curtis' father was a United States Senator from Kansas.

Mrs. Curtis resided in Washington before her marriage and separation. The Curtis have no children.

Stories About Animals Freshen Stodgy Facts About Our History

Girl Who Disliked Study in School Composes 'Animal Pioneers.'

When she was but 8 years old, a Vermont girl sat at a book-laden table in a public library and made two important decisions—that somebody should write a history that wasn't dull, stodgy and unrelated to everyday living; and that when she grew up and wrote stories for children, she would remember exactly how old 8-year-old boys and girls are, and never "write down" to them.

The result of these resolutions is "Animal Pioneers," a history of America. The author is Catherine Cate Coblenz, wife of Dr. W. W. Coblenz, physicist at the United States Bureau of Standards.

"I wrote it for children who disliked history, because I always disliked it so heartily myself," Mrs. Coblenz said yesterday at her home, 2737 Macomb street northwest.

"I have always felt dry facts that bear no relation to life as a child sees it should never be thrust on any boy or girl. In 'Animal Pioneers,' I have been careful to keep the historical background accurate, and have made an effort indirectly to interest children in history by relating stories built around the animals who had a part in the discovery, exploration and settlement of America."

She has worked on the book over a period of four years, "though when I started out, I had no idea it would constitute a history," she said. "I was doing research for an entirely different type of book—also based on early American history—when I discovered a story of a greyhound that came over to Yucatan with the Spaniards. Later, it was found by Cortez in Mexico. In writing a narrative around it, I had to incorporate historical facts. That is how my history began."

The stories first appeared separately in juvenile magazines. A publisher finally suggested that Mrs. Coblenz combine them in a book and make the account continuous from the days of the Vikings up through the time of Columbus and on up to 1750, "with animals playing the leading roles instead of men."

The author has constantly reminded herself she must not "write down" to her prospective readers. Working carefully, taking "as much pains as if I were writing a sonnet," she has endeavored to give a colorful account of "true stories hidden in history" about the bull which came to Vinland; the mule which carried Columbus; the dog which first saw the Pacific with Balboa; the horses which adventured with Cortez, Coronado, Cabeza de Vaca; the dogs which came over on the Mayflower; the Jamestown hen; the Puritan cat; the cricket of Cadiz.

New Experience.

"Seeing history from a new point of view was an experience for me. I tried to look at it through the eyes of every animal I wrote about. It wasn't difficult being a cricket long enough to see history as a cricket saw it," she added in her whimsical way, "but being a bee is hard for any length of time!"

Formerly coeditor of "Carillon," a magazine of verse published here in Washington, Mrs. Coblenz has long been identified with poetry, and is the author of many published poems. Countless times she has been urged to send her volume of verse to a publisher, but has consistently refused on the plea, "my verse is still developing. I am not yet ready to have it in a book."

She has found poetry much more difficult to write than prose, but believes "skill in one helps in the other." After all, she says, "both depend on an appreciation of words and a sense of rhythm. I have discovered that when my conscious mind is busiest with prose, poetry comes through. And I'll have to admit that when it does, I put away the prose for poetry—every time."

Sister Complimented.

While congratulatory calls came in by the dozens to Mrs. Coblenz yesterday, her sister, Dr. L. Huntley Cate, was also the recipient of numerous congratulatory messages. She opened her offices at 708 Twentieth street as associate physician of George Washington University and established a record—that of being the first woman physician connected with the university proper.

Associated with Dr. Daniel Borden, head of the health administration of the university, and with Dr. Robert Harmon, Dr. Arnold McNitt, Dr. M. W. Glover and Dr. Hornaday, she will observe regular office hours and in addition will devote some evening hours to pupils at the university. She will also be permitted to establish a private practice.

Both Mrs. Coblenz and Dr. Cate hold A. B. degrees from George Washington University, where they finished the four-year course by attending night classes during the years when they worked for the Government by day.

Dr. Cate helped to defray the cost of her medical education by working two years at the Federal Institution for Women at Alderson, W. Va. In 1933 she received her medical degree from George Washington University and served as an interne in George Washington University Hospital for a year.

Repentant Hindus Sail.

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Oct. 13 (AP).—Four hundred Hindus sailed today on a "voyage of atonement," to their native India. By returning to their homeland they hoped to erase the sin against the Hindu orthodoxy, committed when they crossed the "black ocean" to come to Trinidad as indentured laborers before the system was abolished in 1917.

M'Nair 'Recalls' His Resignation Of Mayor's Post

City Council Ignores Plea to Withdraw Action at Pittsburgh.

By the Associated Press.
Pittsburgh, Oct. 13.—William N. McNair withdrew his resignation as mayor today, but the new city administration ignored his request for reinstatement.

Just seven days after quitting, he sent his former executive secretary to the city clerk's office with a one-sentence letter asking city council to refrain "from consideration" of the resignation.

He said he based his action on the failure of council to accept the resignation, "in a legal manner." The city clerk sent the letter to Cornelius D. Scully, McNair's successor—who holds the title of acting mayor and president of council.

Scully said:

"He isn't the mayor and he has no standing. If he wants to take any steps in court he can." McNair's action came as a surprise and drew conflicting expressions from his opponents and supporters.

Gregory Zatkovich, the former secretary and former city solicitor for McNair, said the step was based on a law stipulating that no ordinance or resolution may be passed finally on the day of its introduction.

He set forth that council accepted a resolution to accept McNair's resignation and named Scully his successor all in the same day.

McNair, whose two years and eight months in office was filled with escapades that kept constantly in the limelight, said: "Council didn't accept my resignation in a legal manner, so I thought I'd better straighten it all out so the city will have a proper mayor again."

Bullitt Is Greeted By French Premier

Paris, Oct. 13 (AP).—Ambassador William C. Bullitt pledged himself to efforts to reinforce Franco-American friendship on the basis of loyalty to "liberty, democracy and peace" in presenting his credentials to President Albert Lebrun today. Lebrun replied he would find the French unanimously in accord with his efforts.

The new United States envoy, who succeeds Jesse Isidor Straus, resigned prior to his recent death, brought greetings to President Lebrun from President Roosevelt "for the happiness and prosperity of your great country."

The ceremony was held in the Elysee Palace.

Replying to Ambassador Bullitt, M. Lebrun said: "The secular friendship uniting our two nations corresponds in a manner never more clear to the instinctive wishes and thoughts of our two peoples. The principles of liberty, democracy and peace are to both peoples the objects of a veritable cult."

Samuel Scalin, Wife Marking Golden Jubilee

Barber to Three Presidents
Other Notables Wedded
50 Years.

Samuel Scalin, the barber, whose skill with scissors, lather and razor made the lives of the late Presidents Harrison, Theodore Roosevelt and Taft honorably happier, today will celebrate his golden wedding anniversary with Mrs. Scalin beaming at his side as they receive their guests in their home at 3210 Warder street northwest.

For it was on an idyllic October 14, 1886, that young Scalin, not long in these United States from his native, Palermo, Italy, took pretty, olive-cheeked Francis Bonvaries for his bride. Then they went riding away in a handsome carriage, and lived happily ever afterward.

Such a bright day it was when Samuel and Frances took their vows. Leaves danced in the street like gypsies. The bride's cheeks were ruddy as the apples on the tree. It was spontaneous and gay that day, and after the ceremony there was singing and the guests drank the red and white wines of Palermo.

Samuel Scalin was one of the best barbers in the New World he had left Italy to conquer. Besides a positive genius for his trade, which he made into an art, he was popular because of his geniality. He could talk on most any subject, and he had a merry twinkle in his eye and a hearty laugh that made him a magnet, attracting friends.

Served Presidents.
Besides the Presidents he served, there were many other greats and near-greats in prewar Washington who shared his attention professionally as well as his friendship.

Three of his favorite clients were Admiral Dewey, Gen. Phillip Sheridan and the late Charles Glover, the financier.

"Tell me, Samuel, what do you think of this and that?" they would ask as he attended them.
And Samuel Scalin would answer. Outside it was an adolescent world—an adolescent America. Automobiles were snorting curiosities. The hansom cabs rattled along. The movies, when seen, might be viewed as though through a rain of cinders. Elmer had just down the channel. Europe was an armed camp, but nothing would ever come of it. Barbering went on, just as conversation of the sort familiar to Samuel Scalin and his distinguished clients. Men's privileges.

Children to John Fete.
Today Scalin will be absent from the shop he still operates at 1706 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

There are six children of the happy marriage he made half a century ago. These are Joseph Scalin, Mrs. Vito Radice, Paul Scalin, Mrs. William J. Grenfell, George Scalin and Mrs. S. Sidoti. In addition, there is an adopted daughter, Miss Amelia Scalin. There are eight grandchildren, too, who will wish their grandparents many happy returns of the day.

Samuel Scalin was born in 1885 and came to the United States when he was 16. Mrs. Scalin is a native of Washington. She was an active member of the Red Cross during the World War.

The wine of Palermo will flow out at the Warder street home today, just as it did 50 years ago, when the world of the Scalins was beginning and the future was a fascinating mystery ahead.

Sleeper 'Flattened' By Car Sues Cousin In $25,000 Action

A quiet summer nap on the cool, shady grass of a farm near Forestville, Va., that was interrupted when an automobile driven by his cousin ran over him, was made the basis for a suit for $25,000 in District Court yesterday.

The suit was brought by Robert A. Poole, 1516 Columbia road north- west, against Dr. Bernard A. Poole, of Herndon, Va.

Robert Poole claimed he had sought a peaceful nook in which to take a few minutes' repose after helping Paul A. Pullman, owner of the farm, dig a well. He was asleep, he said, when his cousin, a veterinarian, got into his automobile to drive away. Not seeing the sleeping man, the machine was driven over him, inflicting serious and permanent injuries.

Mrs. Loring, returning from church, thought Corinna had eloped. The next day, however, she became alarmed.

On Wednesday, the day he was to have been married, Tear visited newspaper offices, submitted photographs of Corinna and asked for assistance. The photographs were published Thursday. Two days later they were published again, but this time under headlines saying that Corinna Loring's body, bearing signs

New Rose Named Mrs. Carter Glass

Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 13 (AP).—A new variety of rose, discovered and developed by a Lynchburg florist, has been named Mrs. Carter Glass, for the wife of Virginia's senior Senator.

The Mrs. Carter Glass rose is of a peach pink, apricot shade. By budding and grafting, W. M. Doyle, Jr., built up a stock of 2,000 plants which were ready for the first cutting last week. A patent has been applied for and the rose will be ready for the public by spring.

Doyle said his firm expects to introduce the rose on a national scale next year. It is the first hothouse rose to be developed in the South by a commercial grower, he said.

There has been a lull in the investigation now for several months.

The only mention of Corinna Loring has been in connection with the periodical arrests of Tear's brother, George Tear, described by police as a "small-time racketeer." He was arrested in connection with the shooting several months ago of Joseph Edward O'Brien, said by police to be the work of the Warring "Foggy Bottom" gang. Tear was out on bond in that case when he was arrested again on a liquor case.

Minister Wins William Hard's Letter Contest

'Abominates Persecution' of Foes by New Deal, Says Kansas City Pastor.

A Kansas City minister who wrote that "I abominate the persecution of people who are opposed to the New Deal," was announced last night as the winner of first prize in the William Hard letter-writing contest on "Why I Have Changed from Roosevelt to Landon."

He is the Rev. Albert H. Eggleston, of First Presbyterian Church, Kansas City, Mo., and received $200 for his efforts. Second prize of $100 in the contest, conducted by Hard under sponsorship of the Republican National Committee, went to Jack Murray, a laborer of Fort Wayne, Ind. Third prize, each receiving $50, were Mrs. L. S. Robison, Turley, Okla., and Mrs. Otto Hasek, of St. Louis, Mo.

"In 1933 I was for Roosevelt because it seemed that at last we were to have effective action toward alleviating the terrible distress caused by the depression."

"I have changed to Landon because I have ceased to believe in the sincerity of Roosevelt, because Roosevelt cannot escape responsibility for the acts of Farley, Hopkins, Tugwell and others."

"Because millions of unemployed have been created by the bungling, wasteful, methods of the WPA."

"Because of the wreckage of the principle of the civil service and the political exploitation of the hunger of millions of needy people."

"Because of the increasing cost of living, and the increasing burden on all types of business caused by ever-mounting taxation."

"Because I believe that the power and functions of the Supreme Court must be safeguarded."

"Because I believe that the centralization of power is becoming a real menace to our institutions."

"Because I abominate the persecution of people who are opposed to the New Deal."

"Because I believe Landon to be sincere, courageous, sagacious, and fundamentally sound on social, economic and moral issues."

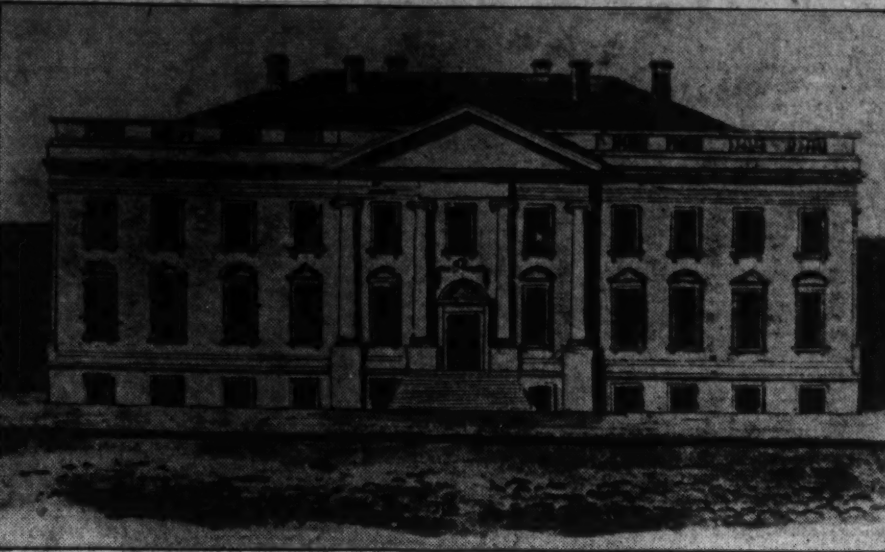

Taxes Ruining Nation, Republican Rally Told

Present day high taxes are ruining the Nation, Judge John H. Connaughton asserted in an address before a rally-meeting of the Arlington County Republican Club in Cherrydale, Firemen's Hall last night.

"What this country needs in the White House today is someone with respect for the Constitution," declared Judge Connaughton.

Speakers included Capt. Crandall Mackey, former Commonwealth's attorney.

President's Mansion Before It Became the White House

This view of the White House shows the structure as it was in 1807. It became the White House when its sandstone walls were painted white after it had been burned by the British in the year of 1814.

scription was placed on a metal plate, and this was sandwiched between stones in such a way as to be invisible.

If that were done at the White House, locating the edges of the metal plate would be more difficult than in the case of most structures, thanks to the efforts of the British to destroy it, has been plastered and painted many times in the interval.

But suppose the mystery were solved, the cornerstones located? What would happen? The answer is nothing. When a cornerstone is hollowed out and stuffed with a Bible, coins, newspapers and the like, it is meant to be a legacy to the archeologists of a far-distant today. Old as it is, the White House is not yet ready for the archeologists.

The current speculation is simply in answer to a long-felt curiosity, and that it could come at this particular time shows how little attaches of the White House are disturbed by the quadrennial battle over who is going to live in the mansion.

One reason for the lack of information concerning the White House cornerstone laying may be found in the fact that not much importance was attached to the structure at first.

True, George Washington selected the site—a cornfield, part of the David Burnes farm that extended south to the Potomac River. True too, the city commissioners offered $500 for the best plan, a prize that was won by James Hoban, architect from Dublin, Ireland.

But the failure of Congress to provide money for making the White House comfortable in those early days would indicate that not a great deal of attention was given it.

The mansion, modeled after the palace of the Duke of Leinster, in Ireland, was first occupied by President and Mrs. John Adams, who moved there in November, 1800, the year Washington became the seat of Government. At that time it was far from complete, and much discomfort was experienced, particularly as to heating and lighting. The east room, now the most ornate in the house, then was used to dry the family wash.

The White House was not finished until 1826. Then and for many years afterward it obtained its water from springs in the vicinity of what is now Franklin Square. The President's House, as it was first called, was damaged considerably by a fire started by British soldiers, who invaded the city in 1814 and sent President Madison and his vivacious wife, Dolley, scurrying for safety.

The mansion was restored by Hoban. White paint was applied to hide the discoloration caused by smoke, and the structure since has been known as the White House.

The White House caught fire a second time during the regime of President Hoover, but the damage was confined to the executive office. While repairs were being made, President Hoover used the office of Gen. John J. Pershing in the State, War and Navy Building.

Hitler Is Called 'Nearly a Saint'

Edinburgh, Oct. 13 (U.P.)—Adolf Hitler "is as near a saint as any man can be," Lord William Scott told the Scottish 1924 Club today.

"He does not smoke, swear nor drink, and has no vices at all—altogether a very tiresome sort of man," he said.

Lord William said Hitler had a grip on Germany such as never possessed by anybody, "not even Frederick the Great."

"Hitler has a vast belief in himself that he wants to take Ukraine from Russia," he said. "The Ukrainians never felt themselves a part of Russia, and I have no doubt the Germans will find a certain amount of Ukrainian support if they ever find their way there. The trouble is that every country in Europe will try to stop the Germans from getting there."

Byrd Predicts Spending Rise If Landon Wins

Asserts Republican Offers No Good Substitute for Present Relief.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Oct. 13.—Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, predicted in an address tonight that if Gov. Alf M. Landon is elected President and his pledges are redeemed "an increase in public spending will be necessary."

"Taxpayers should take note that Gov. Landon, if elected, proposes to finance not only the cost of social security and old-age pensions, but the new farm bounty as well by direct and visible taxes," Senator Byrd said.

The Virginia Senator, making his first address of the campaign, said the Republican Presidential nominee declared the New Deal destructive of the American system of government, and then "proceeds to embrace all the particular measures that identify and characterize the so-called New Deal."

Relief Expenditures.

"So far as relief expenditures are concerned," Senator Byrd continued, "Gov. Landon offers no constructive substitutes for the present system of relief and offers no program of reduction of expenditures except such as may be possible by the improvement of general business conditions which would equally benefit a Democratic Administration."

The Senator, who is recuperating from a recent illness, spoke only to a radio audience. He took cognizance of use by the Republicans of his own criticisms of certain measures of the New Deal, asserted he had no apologies for his record and called attention to his support of other Administration measures.

The People's Counsel.

Regardless of any rumors that may have reached the ears of People's Counsel Roberts, no one acquainted with his energetic public service will suspect him of resigning because of differences with the Public Utilities Commission. On the contrary, his resignation must be connected with the completion of various cases and projects on which he has worked ably and conscientiously.

Having gained wide experience, and fully established his reputation as a capable champion of the public welfare, Mr. Roberts now wishes to turn his activities into more remunerative fields. His decision will be regretted by many, for his outspoken demands for community betterment are closely associated with various notable achievements.

It does not follow, however, that the position of people's counsel should be abolished. Certainly it would be a mistake to assume that all the important problems involving the interests of the public and the local utilities have been solved. The need for aggressive championship of consumer interests is likely to be as great in the next few years as it has been in Mr. Roberts' term of service.

The retiring people's counsel suggests that with the abolition of his office the P. U. C. should be granted a full-time general counsel who would be independent of the corporation counsel's office. At present an assistant corporation counsel serves as attorney for the utility regulating agency. Its need for competent legal services is apparent. But such an official could not take the place of the people's counsel.

Many States have found it advisable to hire expert attorneys to represent the interests of consumers before utility commissions. In this way the viewpoint of the public as well as that of the utilities can be laid before quasi-judicial regulatory bodies. Especially in the District, where public opinion is often pitifully inarticulate, an experienced attorney to "represent and appear for the people" can render essential community service.

The value of the position depends largely upon the individual selected to fill it. But experience of the last few years indicates that competent advocates for the people can not be readily found.

In Opposition Territory.

When Col. Knox carried the Republican Presidential campaign into Virginia and Carolina, he probably had no great expectations of swinging these traditionally Democratic States away from their political moorings. No doubt the same is true of President Roosevelt's invasion of Kansas. Yet the President made eight talks in his flying trip across Gov. Landon's home State, in addition to his major address just across the river in Kansas City, Mo. And Col. Knox's address at Richmond was one of the most effective he has delivered since his nomination.

In both instances there seems to be a healthy recognition of the fact that national campaigns serve a larger purpose than the election of a President and Vice President. If the candidates were interested solely in the results on November 3, their activities would likely be entirely confined to the known doubtful States, most of which cluster around the Great Lakes. In all probability the outcome will turn upon the decisions of the voters in some 16 States. Yet the entire country is vitally interested in that decision, and each section is certainly entitled to a presentation of the issues from authoritative sources.

Political strategists too often neglect areas that are known to be sympathetic to the opposing party. Usually the "solid South" is regarded as so surely Democratic that little effort is made by the Republicans even to present their case in that region. Of course, this customary indifference toward the South is itself one reason why the section remains overwhelmingly Democratic. Merely from the long-range viewpoint of his own party, therefore, Col. Knox is far from wasting his time below the Mason and Dixon line.

If an election is to serve its greatest purpose, it must clarify national problems as well as give temporary mandate to executive and legislative officials. Too often, of course, the real issues are confused by propaganda and insincere lip-service to political slogans. When all hally-hoo has been discarded, however, there remains in the debates of every campaign a tremendous amount of valuable information about governmental policies. First-hand delivery of this information should not be denied to any section of the country. Col. Knox has been especially energetic in carrying the G. O. P. message throughout the country. In this respect his record stands out in sharp contrast to that of Vice President, Garner who, second only to Dr. Tugwell, is at present the real forgotten man.

Mr. Landon's Relief Program.

To criticize the flagrant shortcomings and abuses of the Administration's relief program is all too easy. To offer an alternative program, sufficiently detailed to carry conviction that in operation it would prove both less extravagant and more efficient, is a much harder undertaking.

It is, moreover, a task particularly difficult for the Republican candidate. Neglect of unemployment policy during previous post-war Republican Administrations is obviously partly responsible for the crudity of New Deal improvisations in this field.

Therefore Gov. Landon's speech at Cleveland, in which he sketched a "broad outline" of his party's position on relief, must for two separate reasons be regarded as one of the most important of the campaign. In the first place it gave a sufficiently clear picture of the way in which the relief problem would be handled in the event of Mr. Landon's election. In the second place it showed that this procedure would be very different from the traditional laissez faire assumption that government is under no obligation to provide either employment or assistance for those unable to find work.

It is a sign of thoughtful approach to the relief problem that Mr. Landon advocates a nation-wide network of public employment exchanges as a fundamental part of his program. "We must see to it," he says, "that our workers on relief are put in touch at once with such jobs as are available. If I am elected we will provide an efficient employment service. That means a service which will bridge the gap between the relief rolls and a reviving industry willing to play its part in the movement for recovery."

As all students of unemployment relief have long recognized, there is an essential relationship between the payment of benefits to the unemployed and the presentation of jobs available for the unemployed.

Whether the benefit payment takes the form of outright dole, unemployment insurance or work relief, it is in all cases necessary to establish some check on the recipient as only a public employment service can provide. The relief payment should always be made contingent on demonstrated willingness to accept employment at current wage rates wherever such employment is available. Otherwise relief will rapidly degenerate into subsidies to the work-shy, from which the Administration's program is now scarcely distinguishable.

Another very important reason for making all relief payments through public employment offices is that only thus can adequate and current statistics on the volume, nature and incidence of unemployment be collected.

Mr. Landon spoke conservatively when he called it "inexcusable" that after nearly four years in office the Roosevelt Administration has no real knowledge of how many unemployed there are, nor who they are, nor where they are. The fact that Administration leaders still talk loosely about "taking a census" of the unemployed shows that they have not merely failed to solve the fundamental problem in unemployment relief, but that they do not know how to solve it.

This is further attested by the continuing failure to achieve adequate co-ordination of the present Federal-State employment service and the entirely separate relief agencies. Although the Department of Labor, on relatively trivial outlay, has built the basis of an excellent employment exchange system, Mr. Harry Hopkins and his subordinates give it only such co-operation as seems to them desirable.

It is to be gathered from Gov. Landon's Cleveland speech that, if elected, he would as soon as possible give the non-political employment service, which is able to apply the essential work-test to all relief applicants, supervision over the relief outlays. Such a move would be an enormous step forward and without any curtailment of relief to the deserving would soon result in enormous savings through the elimination of duplicating and competing administrative offices.

Mr. Landon makes still another suggestion of fundamental importance in demanding that the local communities should themselves determine such work-relief projects as are undertaken. Here again the New Deal made a good start and then fumbled through administrative incompetency. The National Resources Committee, co-ordinating the work of the State Planning Boards, was supposed to do exactly what Gov. Landon now urges. But Harry Hopkins, running wild with the billions placed at his disposal, has throughout virtually ignored the carefully planned projects which have been drafted by these competent local agencies.

It is easy to see certain qualifications which might have to be made in Mr. Landon's proposal to return the administration of relief to the States. The efficient employment service which he advocates might well need to come under more strongly centralized direction in localities where cheap politics interfere with its effective functioning. But if the employment exchange system were further federalized and manned by competent technicians, as is now largely the case, it would be the easier to divest the Federal Government of the direct relief activities which it has bungled so terribly and at such enormous cost.

That is the essence of the relief program sketched by Mr. Landon at Cleveland. And it is a safe bet that no Administration spokesman will be able to deny its superiority to that now in effect.

Another Step Forward.

The agreement reached between the United States, Great Britain and France for the regulation of the flow of gold between them is a natural but nonetheless highly desirable outgrowth of the tripartite accord of September 25.

That "gentlemen's agreement" was designed to prevent a currency war from developing out of French devaluation. It also pledged the three governments to work together for de facto stabilization of their exchanges. The new agreement provides the needed mechanism whereby last month's good resolutions can be carried further toward constructive results.

Since the devaluation of the franc, the dollar has been the only major unit having a fixed value in terms of gold, therefore the only measuring stick by which currencies could be valued in relationship to other currencies. Thus, if there is to be monetary stabilization, the dollar is the peg upon which such hoped-for action must be hung.

When France went off gold, however, existing Treasury regulations regarding the outward flow of the metal served as a barrier to stabilization. The export of gold from this country was prohibited except to nations that permitted the export of gold to us, i. e. to gold standard nations. Dis-solution of the gold bloc has now permitted establishment of a new, though as yet rather shaky and highly-restricted, gold standard. The implications of this for the restoration of international trade are of course far-reaching.

Within undetermined limits, violent fluctuations in the exchanges will henceforth be prevented, first through the operations of three equalization funds acting independently and, second, through governmental transfers of gold, which is thus re-established as a medium for settling international balances.

That the new agreement may prove a real forward step toward real stabilization is obvious. Yet it must be pointed out that it is subject to cancellation on 24 hours' notice. None of the three powers is as yet prepared to establish a fixed and permanent gold ratio for its currency. Even this country, where a fixed price for gold has obtained since January, 1934, still reserves the right to change that price if circumstances warrant such a step.

Nevertheless it is probable that the escape clause will not lightly be invoked; that the three great democracies will actually carry out the agreement in such a way as to hasten the end of the long period of monetary uncertainty. There is no need to overestimate what is achieved in order to recognize its potential importance for a world still terribly disordered.

High Browsing.

There is a nostalgic lament today over the fact that book-browsing, as such, has been outmoded. Some say this is due to the rise of book stalls in drug stores. The bibliophile derives little pleasure looking for a first edition Anthony Adverse among the ice cream sodas. Other diards claim the joys of browsing died an unnatural death when book clubs and libraries on wheels began to flourish. The clubs work on the order of an automat—put in your money and have a book thrown in your face. The rubber-tired library is a sort of mental missionary for people in out-of-the-way communities. In other words, the easy accessibility of books has put browsing in the class with petticoats—obsolete and unnecessary.

Last summer New York City even boasted a park Parnassus, where bench sitters could have all the comforts of a home library. And now, in keeping with the times, airplane companies are selecting and installing books for the pleasure of their passengers. The Pan-American Airways has just compiled its first trans-Pacific "flying library." Among the 15 books which will amuse ocean-hoppers on the China Clipper, Hawaii Clipper and Philippine Clipper is James Hilton's "Lost Horizon." Perhaps the Pan-American hopes that Mr. Hilton will do for traveling by air what "It Happened One Night" did for traveling by bus. At any rate it will succeed in putting a few volumes on a plane with book prices—sky high.

An astronomer says he has found several holes in the Milky Way. Maybe he has located the strainer.

Hope Springs Eternal—

Legitimate Protest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You will, I hope, afford a daily reader opportunity to correct one or two painful inaccuracies in a news item in The Post of October 13 concerning award of the degree of doctor of philosophy, by the Brookings Institution, to Messrs. Leo Pasvolksy, Lewis Meriam and the undersigned.

Your reporter, after noting that Dr. Pasvolksy is a Russian by birth, asserts that he is "the author of many books dealing with Russia and communism." Next to Agatha Christie, Dr. Pasvolksy is one of my favorite authors and in his truly fascinating studies on monetary issues it is difficult to discover anything even remotely bearing on the philosophy of communism. Since Dr. Pasvolksy is now with the Department of State, I take it this is an insidious effort to link bolshevism with the New Deal. Of course, you are at liberty to make such unwarrantable suggestions on your editorial page. But I do think you might try to keep your news columns impartial.

With reference to myself, your paper states that "this year he was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for his editorial on League of Nations affairs." Since you have previously placarded the town with previous statements that your editor received this prize for generally "distinguished editorial writing," I cannot understand your present entirely mistaken effort to particularize. Incidentally, reading The Post alone, one might entirely ignore the fact that your editor did not receive the Pulitzer Prize for editorial writing, but merely shared it this year with Mr. Parker, of the Scripps-Howard chain.

In spite of its shortcomings, I am very fond of The Post and shall probably continue to read it faithfully. But let me assure you, that it took all the philosophy with which I have been recently doctored to maintain my equanimity at the above examples of reporterly license.

Not Publicity Seekers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a letter to The Post, commending it upon "its sound and eminently fair editorial of October 8 with respect to the decision of the Public Utility Commission in the matter of the operation of the one-man car," Mr. Thomas J. D. Fuller states a desire of the Capital Transit Co. and its stockholders and then takes an unwarranted slap at citizen associations and publicists for the public good, whom he terms "publicity seekers."

And it is here the need for repair enters in. How can our American cavalry officer raise his sword to check his men if his sword is only half there? Unless the sculptor intended to show a cannon shot had carried away the weapon's upper half, which does not seem a likely idea—it must be rust and the weather have combined to break the sword at that point.

Can it be the official caretaker of our monuments is the only person who cannot see the need for this repair? I am indulging the hope that at an early visit to this favorite spot I may find the broken sword being replaced by a weapon of proper length to carry the message. "Halt, there's danger ahead!"

bronze was not to be an event of the history-making kind, like the fatal charge that destroyed Napoleon's Old Guard; but in a humbler way the civil war incident does run true to form. To each commander—the Frenchmen in his gorgeous uniform and the Union leader in his plain blue with stripes of yellow—the situation indicates "Danger ahead!" Each piece of painting and sculpture tells the same story.

And it is here the need for repair enters in. How can our American cavalry officer raise his sword to check his men if his sword is only half there? Unless the sculptor intended to show a cannon shot had carried away the weapon's upper half, which does not seem a likely idea—it must be rust and the weather have combined to break the sword at that point.

Can it be the official caretaker of our monuments is the only person who cannot see the need for this repair? "publicity seekers," simply because they differ with his views, and endeavor to point out the evils in the whole traffic and transportation system in this city.

There is no plausible excuse for ridicule of a person who signs his name to a letter to the editor as a matter of good faith. Would Mr. Fuller, whom, I presume, signed his right name to the letter, like to be placed in the category of a "publicity seeker"? Of course not.

Mr. Fuller is like the rest of us who wrote letters—but he is a publicist who has come to the defense of his own position, the stockholders and the premises of the Capital Transit Co. I respect him more for the honor of having signed his name to that letter. I dislike the man who conceals himself behind a cloak to flail critics who disagree with him.

Analyzing Poll Returns.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the October 11 edition of The Post, a letter by Frank R. Murphy complained of the fact that the Literary Digest poll showed a greater number of 1932 Republican ballots than Democratic.

Using the latest figures available, I have tried to adjust the results to meet his objections. Forty States are now listed with 591,120 1932 Republican ballots and 530,183 1932 Democratic ballots. In 1932 those 40 States cast 21,119,994 votes, or 59.12 per cent, for Roosevelt, and 14,603,945, or 40.88 per cent, for Hoover.

To adjust the 1936 poll to that ratio, we must deduct 224,520 1932 Republican ballots, using only 366,600 1932 Republican and 530,183 1932 Democratic ballots.

Since the 591,120 1932 Republican ballots were distributed 66.42 per cent for Landon, 12.11 per cent for Roosevelt, and 1.47 for Lemke, the 1932 Republican excess of 224,520 ballots must be deducted in like ratio, depriving Landon of 194,030. Roosevelt of 27,189, and Lemke of 3,900.

The result of Digest poll then reads:
Landon 519,421
Roosevelt 458,203
Lemke 41,525

"Sounding Brass."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This letter is prompted by a recent ruling of the school board of my native county in the good old State of Maryland denying the privileges of a public school education to the Lemke children because they had religious scruples against saluting the flag as required by one of the many foolish statutory laws gradually being engrained into our jurisprudence, and endangering our democratic form of government.

If this species of legislation, having the color of intolerance, is not checked, freedom of speech, freedom of religion and freedom of the press will be relegated to the background, and the Nation blighted with the spirit of intolerance backed by the power and army of a dictator.

There is no prohibition in the divine law against patriotism as a sentiment, but there is a decided prohibition against setting up needless forms and ceremonies that give patriotism an aspect of idolatry such as an enforced salute of the flag in the public schools. The flag of itself has no intrinsic or inherent sacredness that demands worship, nor has the government or country for which the flag stands.

If the government of which the flag is an emblem is such that it commands the respect and love of its citizens, and that government permits the enactment of laws that deprive its citizens of freedom of conscience, its citizens will gradually lose respect for the government and no legislative enactment can compel respect for such a law. Our prohibition experiment proves the truth of this statement. Respect for a principle, thing or country cannot be legislated into people with any better results than morals can be. Respect must be voluntary, not involuntary to be of service.

The flag of a country is the emblem of the government in control, and what that government stands for is the measure of the respect of its citizens. If the government is good, it commands respect and needs no laws to enforce it. Patriotism without that kind of respect is like religion without charity: just sound and empty, and lacking in cynicism.

Deflation Is Never Pleasant.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Three editorials on Father Coughlin have lately appeared in The Post. They were full of abuse. The latest one, published last Saturday, declares that he "bombast" has been deflated, that he has indulged in "partisan oratory," that he pumps "economic bilge" out over the airways, that his "monetary twaddle" has been found inconsistent with two Papal encyclicals and that he has been exposed as "an upstart who distorts the views of the Holy See."

This is scurrilous journalism unworthy of The Post. If The Post can refute, with facts and arguments, the 16 principles of the National Union for Social Justice, let it refute them. People would like to see the most convincing statement, if any, that can be made in refutation of them. If The Post cannot make such reply, it had better let Father Coughlin alone. To continue to use billingsgate against him is in the nature of proof that The Post cannot answer him.

Inexcusable Error.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of October 12, on page 6, under the heading "Packing the Court," the statement is made in the last sentence of the article that President Arthur had no Supreme Court appointments to make during his three and one-half years as President.

On the contrary, Associate Justice Horace Gray, of Massachusetts, was commissioned by President Arthur on December 20, 1881, and was sworn in on January 9, 1882. Associate Justice Samuel Blatchford, of New York, was commissioned by President Arthur on March 22, 1882, and sworn in on April 3, 1882.

Fair Enough

Recalling a Nightmare.

Four years ago today we had prohibition in this country and the reign of the racketeers had invaded the Federal Government.

In New York, the speakeasies about shoulder-to-shoulder on the side streets in the Fifties, all conducted by prominent criminals under political protection, and there was a famous brewery operating openly in New York under the auspices of a notorious murderer.

The legitimate restaurants in the big hotels were almost deserted, as they had been for a dozen years under prohibition, and many valuable hotel properties were bankrupt because the restaurant patronage, on which their operations were based, had been diverted to the criminal speakeasies.

In Chicago, the bootlegging business, the most important factor in local political government of an American city, had been monopolized by a set of gangsters after years of bloody border warfare between the rival factions which had staked out zones.

A member of the United States Senate had made a formal appearance as mourner at the funeral of a fallen criminal henchman. Another United States Senator had been shot through the head by a Government trigger man during the pursuit of a bootlegger near the United States Capitol. The Senator lingered a while and died.

A former member of Congress had been arrested for "tending a still in Maryland and an active member, a prohibitionist, had been compelled to use his Congressional immunity to escape exposure when his baggage leaked on his return from a trip abroad.

A chief of the Anti-Saloon League in New York had been sent to Sing Sing, the morale and reputation of the United States Coast Guard had been fouled with charges of corruption. Government agents with good credentials rode the beer and liquor trucks to provide safe conduct for the bootleggers, the House of Representatives, with a few dissenting voices, had cheered the news that an innocent boy, hitch-hiking in a bootlegger's car, had been shot dead by a prohibition agent, and the President of the United States had been booied by the worst series of crooked and vulgar running amid shouts of "We want beer."

Four years ago Mr. Roosevelt was campaigning for repeal on the bootlegging issue. "Prohibition is doomed," and Mr. Hoover was making his fight on his usual evasion of the question which would have left him free to do nothing about it for a few more years. Mr. Roosevelt won and a short time later prohibition had vanished. Bishop Cannon vanished, too, and the whole system of espionage and corruption, the rule of the bootleggers, the low treachery of prosecutors sworn to enforce the law and of political riff-raff licensed to prey upon both the criminals and citizens was gone.

It was hard to believe at first and people didn't know how to act. A man would walk into a bar and buy himself a drink he didn't want just to convince himself he wasn't drunk. The Coast Guard got its honor back.

Now it is hard to believe that prohibition ever was true. It seems impossible that the United States Government ever employed a team in a laboratory in Washington to devise poisons to kill Americans for so small an error as the hoisting of a drink.

You have to go to the old files to reconstruct the story of the slaughter along the Connecticut Valley that first Christmas under prohibition, when the rule of the Anti-Saloon League was inaugurated, a great killing of a hundred humble mill hands who thought they were buying wine but got wood alcohol and coloring matter. That was a merry Christmas with love from the Sam. The plague of a jam-leg in Kansas, where many a hamestrung victim of the scourge still hopes for complete recovery, has been forgotten by all but the casualists themselves, and it takes an effort of the will to remember that you hid your wretched little pint of bathtub among your underwear and socks and breathed hard going across Indiana for fear some getting caught would mean a search-free, tax-paying American citizen and demand $100 with alternative of six months or a year in jail.

That was only four years ago, and now it appears that the party of Mr. Coughlin and Mr. Hoover is all that stands between us and serious interference with the rights and liberties of the free American.

Mr. Hoover wouldn't scare us, would he?

Culture Among Us.

Students of cultural trends in the Old Dominion must have been intrigued at the news of two desperately contested derbies held in the State within a day of one another. We refer to the spittin' championship at Fishersville, Augusta County, and the chicken pickers' marathon in Richmond.

In toting off the honors as the "spittin'est" man in the South River district, after scoring a bulls-eye at 12 feet 9 inches, Jasper Davis somehow climbed the heights of something or other, as the late J. Edgar used to say. It was a jaw from a hip-pocket which won the title for Davis, thus apparently establishing the superiority of "spit" over "twist" and "sugar-treated twigs" as an implement of long-distance ex-petorators.

Another great contribution to civilization comes from Alfred Canada and John Pleasant, two Richmond Negroes, each of whom picked a chicken in 13 seconds flat, thereby consigning to apparent oblivion Earle Williams, who had claimed the diamond-studded catch-as-catch-can chicken-picking belt on the basis of a 40-second performance.

Next on the agenda of Virginia sport we presume, will come put-out-the-cat-daubies, wife-calling contests and talkathons. There's really nothing to compare with good, clean fun.

New Deal Rule Called 'Threat' By Gov. Landon

Menaces American Form of Government, Kansas Says in Detroit.

igan Republican central committee, arrived later.

A crowd estimated by police at 4,000 greeted Gov. Landon at Monro, where the candidate's special train made its first stop in Michigan.

There and at Wyandotte, an industrial suburb of Detroit, he criticized what he termed the "waste" and "extravagance" of the New Deal.

At Toledo, Ohio, this morning Gov. Landon said that "labor today has its false friends" who in other nations "have already betrayed the men and women who work."

Pratt Samuel Gompers, organizer of the American Federation of Labor, for keeping "organized labor from being destroyed by its socialist enemies," the Kansas said "this wisdom kept organized labor from the great temptation to participate in party politics."

"I am absolutely opposed to any infringement on the rights of labor to organize and any curtailment of the right of freedom of assembly," the Governor said to a crowd in a local theater.

"It is the Government's duty to protect labor and the people in these rights."

"I, for one, am sorry to see the recent split in the ranks of labor and hope it will be speedily healed. The great gains made by labor through its organizations are in danger so long as this division exists. Here, again, unity is requisite for progress and achievement."

"Organized labor," the Kansas said, "in the 50 years of its experience, has made a distinct contribution to our American life. It has achieved progressive reforms for the welfare of working men and women through evolutionary rather than revolutionary processes."

"Workmen's compensation benefits, industrial accident insurance, child labor laws, minimum wage laws, the right of collective bargaining, relief from the abuse of injunctions, reduction of hours of labor—these are among the improvements gained for the working people largely as a result of the efforts of their organizations."

The candidate told his audience to "look abroad."

"Trade unionism has been made a statutory crime in many nations," he said. "The working people have become serfs of the state. Only last week, in an European nation, hours of work in industry were increased 50 per cent, without wage adjustment by the edict of a single man."

Urging organized labor to "be aware of the temptations and ill-lustries promises" offered by government, "no matter how lustrous and enticing," Landon predicted "they mean ultimate dictation by politics."

Kansas Invaded On Roosevelt's Western Swing

'Youth' Theme of His Talk at Kansas City Bowl; He Greets White.

few yards throughout the throng, but only one disturbance occurred, when a gray-haired man was ejected forcibly from the main floor by police, who said he "was raising a disturbance."

In a colorful morning appearance at Wichita, Kans., Mr. Roosevelt asserted that Republican leaders were encouraging "class antagonism" but that voters on November 3 would refuse "to be frightened by fairy tales."

Cheered by Throng. To cheering thousands packed into Wichita Stadium the President said "Republican leaders" have tried to "spread the gospel of fear" in factories and homes and at American firesides.

But the people of the country, he added, remember "too well the real fear, the justified fear, felt all over the Nation in 1932 to be frightened by the silly false fear which is now being preached."

The crowd broke into applause then, but a bigger roar went up when he said: "I do not believe that Kansas would have pulled through the difficult problems of the past four years as splendidly as it has had it not been for Federal co-operation and Federal assistance in many fields of your endeavor."

Not once, however, did Mr. Roosevelt mention Gov. Landon or any other Republican leader by name in his address.

It was estimated the stadium throng totaled 30,000 and that 150,000 persons in all saw the President during his hour and a half stop.

Between Wichita and Kansas City the special train rolled to a stop at Emporia, Kans., home of William Allen White, noted editor and a friend and adviser of Gov. Landon. Mr. Roosevelt said, with a grin: "I am very glad to see all of you, but I don't see Bill White. I wish he were here because I have known him for a great many years and he is a very old friend of mine. I have got to qualify that. He is a very good friend of mine for three and one-half years out of four. I won't say anything about the other six months."

Mr. White was in the crowd—about 100 feet away.

Greets White. When the President spied the editor he said he would not say "anything more about those other six months."

"Thank the Lord," Mr. Roosevelt continued, "we're going into this election with smiles on our faces. Make way for Mr. White."

As the President turned to one side of his loud speaker and called again for Mr. White the latter edged up to the platform and reached up his hand.

"Shoot me this old gray head," came back the 68-year-old newspaperman, smiling broadly and shaking hands.

In a Florence (Kans.) platform talk Mr. Roosevelt added that in every State in which he had been, both agricultural and industrial "things seem to be coming back," and the "people on the whole are a lot better off than they were four years ago."

"I'm for you," came a shout from the crowd at Olathe, Kan., drawing a laugh from the President.

Pledges Farm Aid.

Mr. Roosevelt said at Olathe the Administration's agriculture policy was aimed at security for the farmer and "we are getting somewhere." He added:

"We not only have changed the laws and are going to continue to change them, although not the fundamentals."

The whole Nation wants stability of prices, he said, adding he hoped "we will be able to keep" prices stable once they are leveled out. Improvements that have gone on in education, he said, have not stopped.

Kansas Democratic leaders spent a busy day with the President, and one of them Lynn R. Broderick, national committeeman, said: "We told the President that his visit to Kansas will assure him of the State's nine electoral votes."

Tomorrow morning the President will spend an hour and a half in St. Louis, where he is scheduled for a brief speech, then cross over into Illinois. A major address is slated for Chicago in the evening at the hall where he was named a Presidential candidate in 1932.

On the way he will make platform appearances at East St. Louis, Ridgeley, Bloomington, Pontiac, Joliet, Alton Junction and, perhaps, Springfield.

Text of President Roosevelt's Address to Young People at Kansas City

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Oct. 13. The following is the text of President Roosevelt's speech here today:

It is good to see once again smiling faces, and to hear happy cheers from Young America.

I have just come through eastern Colorado and western Kansas—parts of our national dust bowl—where deep holes in the ground and swirling clouds of dust show the erosion which years of man's neglect has wrought in the soil.

And in your own State you have all seen other examples of waste in the physical resources of our country—water, trees, birds and other wild life.

But through the years of this depression we have had destruction even more tragic than that—waste in the men and women, in human skill, character and life. Of all of the appalling waste of the days of false prosperity and recent disaster, human erosion has been the most ominous.

There was, unfortunately, for a long time in the high places of Government in Washington a school of thought that "human waste" was the concern only of private charity and local communities. We have learned a lot since those days. We no longer believe that human beings hit by flood, drought, unemployment or any other national disaster should be left to themselves with the sole help of such charity as may be locally available to them. It may not be enough to go round.

Government since 1933 has begun to take stock of the human resources of the Nation and it is determined to preserve them.

"Youth Priceless Asset."

As we take stock, we recognize that the most priceless of our human assets are the young men and women of America—the raw material out of which the United States must shape its future.

Nature's deepest instinct is the concern in every parent's heart for the welfare of the children.

It is a law of nature which equals even the instinct for the preservation of life. Indeed it is part of that law, for without the preservation of youth, the race itself would perish. And so, the highest duty of any government is to order public affairs so that opportunities for youth shall be made ever broader and firmer.

We Americans have never lost our sense of this obligation. To a greater degree than any other peoples we have sought to give each rising generation a little better chance in life than the one that preceded it.

The little red schoolhouse for the education of the young, and the church for the training of his spiritual qualities, have always been the first structures to rise in every new settlement, as our ancestors pushed new frontiers through the wilderness.

The school is the last expenditure upon which America should be willing to economize.

Those of us who helped build up the fantastic jazz era of the 1920s, which crashed down over our heads, must feel a peculiarly deep sense of responsibility to our boys and girls who were sunk with us in the ruins.

Really, Conditions.

I need not remind the young people of this country of the black future which lay ahead of them in those days. That was the era of the wanderers—boys and girls who had grown tired of living on the vanishing savings of their parents, and who had set out on the highways in all directions to look for work which they could not find. Those in school and those out of school could not look forward to a place in the community.

The door of opportunity had been slammed in their faces. Hanging around on street corners, roaming about the country in bands vainly looking for work—there was the real danger which America faced.

When the history of the dark days out of which we are now coming is written, it will be said that the great marvel of this period was that those young people have come through, with a full faith in democracy and with a high resolve to preserve it at all costs.

Cities couldn't help, counties couldn't help, States couldn't help, even big business couldn't help. The youth of America had apparently come to the end of the road.

That was the condition that confronted your Federal Government on March 4, 1933.

Your Federal Government acted. Before it laid its hands to any other problem—and there were many of them—it set up the CCC camps to put an immediate end to that hopeless condition.

It cost money to do that, just as it cost our pioneer fathers and mothers money to build the schools in which we have all been trained.

We have done much in the way of a beginning to improve the things in America which have made for waste in human beings.

On the farms and in the cities—throughout the Nation—we are starting to remove those glaring inequalities, those deep-rooted maladjustments which did so much to bring about disaster.

The American people joined with us in 1933 to start this job. A vast majority of the American people in 1936 are with us to see it through. We have made the start in these days, confident that you, the youth of the country—will carry on to finish the job.

That is why we have a national youth program. That is why through our CCC camps and the national youth administration we are trying to keep young people at useful work or in useful education.

In high schools and in colleges the Federal Government has lent a helping hand in keeping youth at the job of learning. Out in the woods, out in the open, the Federal Government has kept the self-respect and the health of hundreds of thousands of young people.

Spends to Aid Youth.

The Federal Government for many years has spent a good many millions of dollars—well-spent dollars, too—to conserve our forests, our crops and our livestock.

We believe in that kind of conservation. You all know how much we have done in that kind of conservation. But now we have begun to spend money on much more important conservation—to save the energy, the ability and the spirit of youth. No money was every better spent.

Nothing has made me happier on this trip than seeing at first-hand that the youthful hitch-hiker has disappeared from our highways and from the box cars and freight trains. The youth of the land can once more look forward with confidence and courage just as we of the older generation did in our day.

No greater satisfaction can come to me than the realization that the youth of America understand what we have tried to do—and approve.

They know that the price we have paid to save our country has been worthwhile.

America has lost a good many things during the depression. Some of them needed to go. I am glad that they have gone. We have lost that false sense of values that puts financial success above every other kind of achievement. We have lost a little of our cocksureness, a little of the bumptiousness which the pharisee had when he thanked God that he was not as other people. We have lost something of that feeling that ours is an "every-man-for-himself" kind of society, in which the law of the jungle is law enough.

Says Morale Is Saved.

But many things we have saved. We have saved our morale. We have preserved our belief in American institutions. In this world of ours where some nations have taken perilous detours, we have faced our problems and have met them with a Democracy. Within that democracy we are determined to solve them.

We have saved above all our faith in the future—a faith under which America has only begun to march.

In that march America will have to be led by the youth of today. It has been our job to clear the ground of what in too many places was a social and economic wilderness. That pioneering has only begun. It will be for you to continue it.

You will discover that in pushing forward this great program of social betterment and social security, you will be met by the same opposition, the same relentless resistance, which faced the frontiersmen of the early West. You will find that your fight against selfishness and injustice, against oppression, and, above all, against war, will take you into a man-sized struggle.

I am telling you this not to discourage you but to stimulate you. Our fight—yours and mine—is to keep our democracy safe by keeping it moving forward. In such a fight it is an unhappy place to be on the side lines. To the young people of America I say: join with us, ours is the real struggle to continue and preserve democracy in America.

Action Is Deferred On Boland's Plea

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 13.—Action on John Martin Boland's latest effort to obtain his release from a Lydane murder conspiracy connection was deferred today until Thursday in order to give his attorney time to look for precedents for the prisoner's release.

Boland, convicted of conspiring with Mrs. Anne Lydane to kill the woman's husband, came before the court on a writ of habeas corpus. He argued that his conviction was void since Mrs. Lydane, indicted jointly with him, was acquitted of the charge.

Bolivian Envoy Here, Presents His Credentials

Guachalla Says His Nation Expects Great Results From Peace Parley.

Dr. Luis Fernando Guachalla, Bolivia's new envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to the United States, yesterday presented his credentials to President Roosevelt.

Although still in his thirties, Dr. Guachalla has had wide experience in the field of international relations. In addition to his former work as professor of international law at the University of La Paz, he has served in diplomatic capacities and later as his country's minister of foreign affairs.

A staunch friend of Pan-Americanism, the new envoy has endorsed the "good neighbor" policy of Roosevelt, which, more than any other principle paved the way for the approaching Pan-American Peace Conference at Buenos Aires.

"All Latin America," Bolivia's representative said, "has followed eagerly and with justified approval the progress of President Roosevelt's good neighbor policy and Secretary Hull's program of commercial reciprocity, on which is founded what has been appropriately called the new Pan-Americanism."

"Having already been convinced of the sincerity of purpose and the possibilities of these new policies, the governments of the Latin-American republics are placing great expectations on the Buenos Aires conference."

In accepting the credentials of the minister, President Roosevelt praised Bolivia for co-operating in the efforts now under way to solve amicably its territorial differences with Paraguay.

Gold, Currency Accord Helpful Wall Street Says

Agreement Will Restrict Fluctuation, Financial Circles Believe.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 13.—Brokers and others engaged in foreign exchange dealings today generally accepted as "helpful" the agreement among the United States, French and British treasuries for shipment of gold when necessary to maintain monetary stability.

Some such arrangement was necessary, it was explained, to make effective the agreement to maintain equilibrium of exchanges reached at the time of devaluation of the French franc.

Until today gold could not be shipped from the United States to either of the other parties in the agreement, because Treasury rules permitted such shipment only to a nation whose central bank bought and sold gold at a fixed price. Only Belgium, theoretically, could fulfill that requirement.

Under the new arrangement, French and British stabilization funds, instead of accumulating huge paper balances in New York for necessary control operations to keep their currencies steady, may purchase the gold here, either earmarking it for their account without moving it, or if it seems desirable to them, making the actual transfer to their own vaults.

Due to Restrict Fluctuations.

General effect of the agreement, observers felt, would be to narrow the ranges of fluctuation of monetary units involved, permitting a normal variation in keeping with the demands of trade.

While it was agreed the machinery for speculation still exists, it was expected this form of manipulation exchange rates for profit would be greatly reduced because of the immense stabilization fund working to defeat any artificial movement would enhance the possibility of loss to speculators.

While export of gold from the United States to either Great Britain or France must be done by the stabilization funds rather than by private banks, in the past, it was explained, the banks may still import gold they have bought in any free market.

Shies at "Force" Hint.

By the Associated Press.

Formation of a "gold bloc" by America, France and Britain, with almost a monopoly of the world gold supply, was described in financial quarters yesterday as a powerful inducement toward monetary stabilization by other nations.

Treasury officials shied off from suggestions that the tripartite control of gold might be used to force other nations into line, but said they expected other governments to join the "gold bloc."

For many months gold has been flowing to the United States, chiefly because of social and financial uncertainties in Europe. The tripartite control of gold would mean that the dollar in 1934 have amounted to about $3,000,000,000.

A gradual return of some of this foreign capital to home countries was foreseen by Government economists today as a result of improved financial conditions abroad.

It was noted, however, that much of the foreign funds had been invested in American factories or securities which could not be quickly liquidated without a loss. Any gold movement away from America, therefore, was expected by Treasury experts to be slow, and relatively small in size.

General Mills To Give Refund Of AAA Taxes

salers who had contracts with General Mills concerns specifically providing for return of the tax in case of invalidation of the law under which it was collected.

At the time of the AAA invalidation it was estimated that $100,000,000 in processing taxes has been impounded, pending final court ruling on the tax law. It was emphasized that there was no way in which the amounts involved could be returned to the final purchasers of the products.

Invalidation of the processing taxes came in the Hoosac Mills case decision by the Supreme Court last January 6. At the last session of Congress the "windfall" tax was enacted, designed to take practically all of the impounded processing tax money for the Government. The legality of the windfall tax clause, however, is being contested in the courts.

New, Grown-Up Capital Bans Once-Loved Hurdy-Gurdy Men

The Police Department is cracking down again: this time on the scattered, scattered remnants of the band of organ grinders who once played in the city streets.

In an order issued yesterday, Maj. Ernest Brown advised members of the police force that "permits are not issued for organ grinders to play on the public streets. Therefore, it is a violation of police regulations."

The smiling music makers with monkeys and tin cups have been hanging on for years, trying desperately to make their gaudy appreciation in a city that had become cold and formalized; a city, perhaps, that wanted music on order, like its morning orange juice and coffee.

One of the reasons for the official disapproval brought on the hurdy-gurdy man was his tin cup, the cash register of his trade. This, officials asserted, smacked too much of alms seeking.

Among the last of the itinerant vendors of tunes was Joe Canzona, whose career as an organ grinder was ruined when the police banned his monkey from the streets.

Another was Pietro Battaglia, a hurdy-gurdy artist. Pietro offered his wares in vain in a city with a sudden preference for long-haired music.

Recently, complaints have been coming in to the Police Department from residents who have been annoyed by the informal music. And it was in answer to those complaints that the order was issued which will sound the requiem of the hurdy-gurdy man.

Cabanatuan, about 100 miles from Manila, received the full force of the storm. The little city of 15,000 reported 71 known dead and 49 missing.

Relief workers called the typhoon the worst in modern Philippine history.

193 Are Dead In Philippine's 3-Day Typhoon

654 Are Reported Missing, 20,000 Homeless as Fear of Epidemics Mounts.

By the Associated Press.

Manila, Oct. 13.—Casualties in Luzon Island's three-day typhoon stood officially tonight at 193 dead and 654 missing, while the number of homeless mounted to 20,000.

Relief authorities feared disease epidemics would develop.

Unofficial reports indicated the death toll probably would reach 400.

Every relief agency in the stricken region, centering about 100 miles north of Manila, went into action, relieving the refugees and searching debris for more victims.

Maj. Gen. Paulino Santos, Philippine army chief of staff, surveyed the flooded Pampanga River valley by airplane and said it resembled a broad sea. Ten persons were drowned and 50 houses were destroyed when a dyke on the river gave way today.

All towns and villages in the valley were inundated. In some places the flood water was 20 feet deep. Crops and livestock were destroyed.

Engineers Back Plan of Ickes For Works Unit

Society Favors Establishment of Department in Government.

A pet idea of Secretary Harold L. Ickes was endorsed yesterday by the National Society of Professional Engineers when it adopted a resolution which, paradoxically, demands the Cabinet scalp of the interior chief.

The society urged establishment of a Department of Public Works, which is provided in a bill introduced in Congress last year. The Secretary of such a department, the resolution continues, should be "a registered professional engineer, or at least a practicing engineer having the full qualifications of a registered professional engineer."

Secretary Ickes, who has aggressively led the fight to change the name of the Interior Department to "Department of Public Works," is a lawyer by profession, not an engineer, hence the engineers' society would not be satisfied with him as head of the proposed agency.

Resolutions urging the Federal Government to employ only registered engineers on construction work, protection against foreign competition and limited use of the term "engineer" also were adopted by the society before concluding its two-day convention at the Hotel Mayflower.

A banquet last night brought the meeting to a close. Speakers were Harry P. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission; Charles West, Undersecretary of the Interior; David Cushman Coyle, consulting engineer of New York, and Arthur V. Sheridan, chief engineer of the Bronx, N. Y.

Pointing out that some foreign countries restrict the practice of professional engineers who are American citizens and, in some cases, impose heavy occupational taxes on these alien engineers, the society urged its several State chapters to work for amendment of statutes "to the end that citizens of foreign countries shall be admitted to practice only under conditions and circumstances equal and reciprocal to those imposed by such foreign countries upon citizens of the respective States."

Warning against indiscriminate use of the term "engineer," the society went on record urging cooperation of all public and private agencies to avoid the use of the designation in referring to any person not legally qualified by registration as a member of the profession.

It is vital that the American people be impressed with the urgency of the conservation movement, convention delegates were told yesterday by Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification administrator.

"This movement," he asserted, "is going to involve more sacrifices than usually go with public service. More personnel must be enlisted than ever before and greater expenditures must be made if we are to put the job across."

"I have said before that unless conservation of resources is undertaken, and on an adequate scale, our nation has only 100 years of virile national existence ahead of it. And I have said further that we have not over 20 years in which to perfect our technique of meeting this threat to our standards of living."

Homesteaders Defy Federal Ouster Order

Government Marks Time as Houston Group Refuses to Move Out.

Houston, Tex., Oct. 13 (AP).—Government agencies made no apparent move today in answer to the refusal of the homesteaders in Houston Gardens, the Nation's first Federal resettlement project, to be ousted from their homes.

D. P. Trent, of Dallas, regional resettlement director, said a minority had refused to sign new contracts offered by the Houston Homestead Association, which took over the project from the Government.

He said: "Protection of the interests of the majority of the homesteaders requires that definite steps be taken to end this situation."

In Washington the office of Maj. J. O. Walker, director of the Resettlement Administration's management division, said resettlement heads awaited details.

Last night homesteaders heard speakers declare home owners would insist on continuance of original contracts. Colonists' leaders said they had retained an attorney.

Trent said payments on the new contracts had not been increased, but decreased from $11.80 to $10.50 monthly. He said the homesteaders now, however, were required to pay monthly installments "averaging about $8 for water, insurance and upkeep payments" which "are only what the homesteaders would have to pay themselves if it were not collected by their association."

Each family in the project received a house, 2 1/2 acres of land, a garage, a chicken house, a septic tank and fruit and nut trees. The price was $2,755.86 with 40 years to pay. Interest was charged at 3 per cent.

Salesman Wounded Oct. 4 in Debt Row Dies at Emergency

Shot twice the night of October 4, during an argument over money with Frank E. Acton, 25, of the 600 block of Seventh street southwest, Donald E. Murch, 23-year-old salesman, of Big Rapids, Mich., died in Emergency Hospital last night. A formal charge of first-degree murder will be lodged against Acton, who has been held ever since the shooting in front of a beer garden at Eleventh and E streets southwest, police said.

The prisoner, according to officials, admitted meeting the victim to discuss payment of an old debt. An argument, which resulted in the fatal shooting, followed.

Both Murch and Acton had police records, police asserted, Acton's including housebreakings and robberies dating back to 1917. Detectives said last night they would question him in connection with armed robberies here during the last few months.

Hollywood Has Horror of Any Stand on Vote

Politics Dynamite in View of Those Who Must Cater to the Mass Public.

By the United Press.
Hollywood, Oct. 13.—By some strange magic, notoriously coy film names are being induced to take definite public stands on the coming Presidential election.
The situation is almost unprecedented. As recently as a month ago this writer tried a quiet check on who in Hollywood was going to vote for whom and was greeted with reactions of sheer horror.
One dark male actor simply stared and whistled when asked. Another remarked with great subtlety that "I think the sun will rise in the east election day."

A blonde feminine star panicked: "Go away. You wanted to print what I thought of the Astor-Thorp case."

Convictions are taboo.
Others turned sweetly sad, and confessed that picture players must be above suspicion of political convictions, or, for that matter, of convictions. Their reasons were:

1. That Republicans couldn't bear to witness a motion picture acted out by Republicans, and would stay away from box offices in large numbers.
2. That the big boss is (A.) a Republican, or (B.) a Democrat, and "what would happen next option time if he found out I disagree with him?"

Since then the Hollywood Reporter, a trade journal, has completed a secret ballot straw vote of the industry, which revealed that out of 6,788 ballots, 5,821 were marked for Roosevelt and 967 for Landon.

Rooting Out Communism.
Louis B. Mayer, vice president in charge of M. P. M. production and president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, told a luncheon of San Francisco businessmen the industry is preparing to root "communism" from ranks of the screen writers, according to Daily Variety, a trade paper.

"We've got Communists in Hollywood, yes; some of them drawing down $2,500 a week," Mr. Mayer was quoted as saying. "They should pack their bags and start back to Moscow."

Mr. Mayer neither named the writers he accuses of being Communists, nor discussed their antecedents.

I am one giving the devil his just due. Today I must pay tribute to Constance Bennett. I do not exaggerate when I say Connie has come in for more caustic newspaper and magazine criticism than any other star. Per haps much of it has been deserved; at times she is a snobish, selfish, and care-free individual. She has seized what she wanted from life, and she wanted much. She has provided trouble aplenty for studio workers assigned to her units.

On the contrary, she has employed the same secretary and household help for years. They touch for her, and how! They say they understand her; that she is a spoiled child ever-so-but one moment, all smiles and repentance the next. They swear the good minimizes the bad.

Miss Bennett is chairman of a committee (this is one of her good acts) of motion picture people who help "The Seeing Eye," a Morris-town, N. J., institution that trains police dogs to guide and care for the blind. Cost of training these dogs is so great that blind persons who really need them can seldom afford the price, so groups of charitable people in various cities donate funds. Miss Bennett, as chairman of a committee that includes Merle Oberon, Claudette Colbert, Joan Crawford, Dolores Del Rio and Gary Cooper, devotes time and money to the cause. Members of her committee say she is by far their most enthusiastic worker.

I am still giggling over a retort magnificent which I heard at Malibu last Sunday. Halliwell Hobbes, the English actor (play's butter roles) was the red-faced target. He was being ribbed by a group of friends, one saying, "Halliwell, you've lived in this country most of your life and earned your money here. Why don't you become a citizen?" "Listen, my good fellows," Hobbes replied, "I was born an Englishman, raised an Englishman, and will die an Englishman." At which a wit-about-town piped, "What's the matter, have you no ambition?"

Shirley Ross, supplanting Jane Froman in the cast of "The Big Broadcast of 1937," again brings to light Miss Froman's pathetic affliction. Blessed with a beautiful singing voice, she returned to Hollywood. Paramount officials heard of her cure and called her for "Big Broadcast," but she was not signed to contract until she had undergone this test:

A publicity staff member was assigned to get her life story. It was his job to excite her, make her angry, arouse her to the point of berating him for his insolence. If she stuttered, she would get no contract. But Jane did not falter once, and elated film moguls hastily grabbed her name on the dotted line. She went to work next day—and muffed her every scene by stuttering.

About The Showshops

THE perfected development of natural color photography is progressing far more rapidly than was the case with sound upon its advent to the screen a round decade ago.

This was demonstrated yesterday afternoon, when the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "Ramona," entirely in the new three-tone Technicolor process, was unrehearsed for the local press in the private projection room in the distributing company's film exchange.

There are color effects in "Ramona" that never have been seen before on the silver sheet. At times, too, there is a little too much diffusion for a completely realistic screen picture, but in the main this newest picturization of a novel that has been filmed many times before represents the finest of Technicolor's recent achievements.

Of course, it already has been demonstrated that Technicolor is wholly capable of coping with fast action and the sweep of outdoor scenes in both "The Dancing Pirate" and "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," but here we have still another bit of chromatic pioneering.

The extraordinary depth of many sequences in "Ramona" is due to a particularly skillful utilization of lighting devices. In many of the scenes the al fresco action is back-lighted brightly with sufficient highlights in the immediate foreground to throw the middle distances into dim tints shot through only occasionally with brilliant splashes of light. By this deft employment of the technical facilities at his command, Director Henry King has given his picture intervals of scenic grandeur that appear to be miles deep.

The story of the Helen Hunt Jackson fiction of the early days of Southern California is sufficiently known to require no recapitulation here. The climax and denouement of the present filmization of the novel have been altered considerably from the book and its earlier screen translations, but there can be no gainsaying the sturdy appeal of this old classic of the book shelves and the cinema. It deals with impregnable human emotions, possesses beauty, conflict and diversified action and is touched with no light hand by the infinite appeal of pathos.

It is never the purpose of these post-preview comments to convey more than a general impression of the merits or demerits of the given picture, but the cast of "Ramona" is one of such uniform excellence and distinguished personnel that I feel the formal Saturday review may be anticipated, for once, in the matter of a recitation of the names of the players who do most to justify Twentieth Century-Fox's boast that in this subject natural-color photography and inherent drama combine to make the play memorable.

Without any attempt to indicate what they do or how they do it, it will suffice for the moment to state merely that the cast is headed by Loretta Young, in the title role; Don Ameche, as Alessandro; Kent Taylor, as Felipe Moreno; Pauline Frederick, Jane Darwell, currently to be seen with John Boles and Rosalind Russell in "Craig's Wife"; Katherine De Mille, John Carradine, J. Carroll Nash, Pedro de Cordoba, Charles Waldron, Claire du Brey, Russell Simpson, Robert Spindola and Chief Thunder Cloud.

If that holds out no promise of superior entertainment, then I give the case up as hopeless.

"Ramona," by the way, comes to the screen at Loew's Capitol on Friday.

Speaking of "miles on end of celluloid drama," as we were back there somewhere, reminds me that several helpful mathematicians have followed the suggestion of a recent paragraph and sent in postcard estimates of how many times around the earth the total footages of the 514 feature films to be released during 1936-37 would reach.

H. G. Cooling, an inspector for the Maryland State Board of Censors, assumes that the films will have an average length of 8,000 feet and also bases his computation upon the premise that there will be only one print of each picture. On this basis, he says, the 514 features would need 778 miles, 4,160 feet, to spin out their aggregate length.

Another helpful reader, bearing in mind that anywhere from 50 to 250 or 300 prints are made of the major screen productions, is sure that this gelatin footage in its entirety would reach four times around the earth upon which we live, at the equator. He also reminds us that the film exchanges of the industry annually ship more than 72,000,000 feet of film in the ordinary course of business and that the gross annual consumption of raw film by the studios is approximately 2,000,000,000 feet.

As I remarked in the earlier jotting, it's sort of a big business we have here!

When Gladys George, who makes her screen debut in Paramount's production of "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie," arrives in the Capitol on Friday, to remain two days, she will be handsomely feted by the Warner Brothers executives in Washington. It seems that "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie" will be shown as chief feature of the bill at the Earle Theater the week of Friday, October 23.

The point of all this, however, is that Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner interests in the Washington territory, will be host to Miss George and the drama critics at luncheon on Saturday.

Miss George, who last year scored a great stage success in "Personal Appearance," made her debut as an actress in Waterbury, Conn., where her parents were members of the Poll Stock Company. She had reached the hardy old age of 3 at the time.

She is supported by a cast of distinction in her first picture. Wait and see.

There have been complaints. I mean to say that yesterday several irate customers of the first-night performance of Ina Claire and Osmond Perkins in "End of Summer," at the National, called up to express a slightly bitter resentment that they had been unable to hear more than two words out of each six ostensibly projected across the footlights by the members of the cast. None of these objectors sat further back in the house than row "M." Having had considerable difficulty with Shepherd Strudwick's lines during the first act from no farther back than the fourth row, I am inclined to feel that the gratuitous remonstrances may not have been ill-founded. Whoever is at the controls should step up his "mixer" to a greater volume of sound, as we say in the projection booth of the wiggle pictures.

Extension of the run of "The Thin Man," with William Powell and Myrna Loy, at the Rialto, has just been made possible by a special concession granted by Manager Rudolph Berger, manager of the local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film exchange. Originally announced to close tonight, "The Thin Man" will continue for a few days longer, although it will not be moved to the Little Theater on Thursday. All other bookings have been canceled. From all signs and portents, this positively is the last chance to see this comedy hit.

Well, I'll Be a Son-of-a-Gun Note!
What! No screen previews today?

Textile Workers To Seek Pay Rise
Providence, R. I., Oct. 13 (AP)—The United Textile Workers of America will demand a Nation-wide 20 per cent wage increase, 40-hour week and a "return to the so-called work load that prevailed during the NRA period," its president, Thomas F. McMahon, announced today.

He said a wage increase was "justified" by business conditions throughout the industry and rising living costs. Workers find it impossible to square present-day wage schedules with living costs, he added.

McMahon said the demands, in accordance with the instructions given by the recent International U. T. W. convention, will be made at a meeting of the union's executive council in New York, not later than October 28.

The executive council will be empowered to designate a definite date for enforcing the demands, McMahon said.

"... and I don't know what to do about this stiff neck of mine. I can't turn my head from side to side at all... See?... I can only move it up and down... So if you want to keep me happy ask me questions only like 'Do you want more money—or a drink cost?' Catch on!"

12 P. M. "Nadine Carroll is a dancer who got some work in a Seventy-second street cafe," an agent relates at Tony's. "She fell, got hurt and is collecting workmen's compensation. So her agent is demanding that she pay him 10 per cent of that—as commission."

"At the '21' bar Ma, Bowles toasts a drink to a pretty miss and then tells her of the days when he was a boy in France..." George Raft does the Charleston, while at a corner table Talullah Bankhead stares at Dr. Rosenbach, the famed antique collector, who sings "I'm a Lone Cowboy."

"At the Ripley dinner," Jack Pearl informs at Le Mirage, "the toastmaster told the waiters to take a walk. Jimmy Walker joined them, explaining he been waiting five years to take a walk."

"My autobiography," Noel Coward attests, "will be 120,000 words long and will tell nothing but the truth..." "Impossible," says a little critic. "There isn't that much truth."

A. M. Beth Brown, the novelist, joins Milti Green at the Cotton Club. "I'd have invited Ben Blue," she whispers. "But it might have ruined the color scheme." "So I'm taken to the hospital," Walter Shirley reveals at the Tavern, "and this radio columnist writes and broadcasts for shut-ins to send me letters. He tells me two letters from shut-ins, who tell me they appreciate my position. Both letters came from the Tombs Prison!"

A. M. Col. Jim Morrison enters the Dixie Club and tells Lou Richman of his proposed flight across the Atlantic. "It's going to be awful," he laments. "Then why not take the boat back?" Richman suggests. "Because," the flyer replies, "shipping the plane back by boat would cost too much."

A. M. Ted Lewis, Jr., and Leroy—youths who dance at the Kit Kat—release their emily in a fist fight with Lewis. Lewis walks to the sign carrying his bill and runs a pencil through his name. Above it the lad revises the spelling—to Louis.

A. M. "An England's worried about this," a newly arrived Britisher laments at Mon Paris. "A member of King Edward's vacation party snapped a picture of him on his hands and knees riding him piggy-back. Since then, Sir Simpson, they're looking for the negative."

"If Melvin Purvis' new book says he caught Dillinger," J. Edgar Hoover reveals at the Stork Club, "it's untrue. He didn't shoot Dillinger. Three men shot him—two are alive and the other... who really should be credited with the capture... was killed by Baby Face Nelson."

A. M. "I'm leaving tomorrow for the Coast," Dudley Field Malone announces at Fifty-third street. "I'm making a cross-country campaign for Landon..." Harry Richmond enters Dave's and says, "I haven't more than 40 people bought those autographed ping-pong balls? We cut the price to $1 each."

A. M. "... Well, dear... Did you register?... They couldn't have... They really made you take a literacy test?... Why didn't you tell 'em you're a comedian?... 'em—and that's why they made you take it... G'night."

Debt Suit Is Outlawed
Los Angeles, Oct. 13 (AP)—Greta Garbo, in a court answer filed today, contended the statute of limitations barred a suit against her for $100,000 allegedly loaned her in Swedish kronen and German marks in 1924. The suit was brought by H. Fitzpatrick, assignee for D. Schratte, German film producer.

Garbo was advanced the money by the actress by Schratte in three sums, to be repaid when Schratte needed it, when Miss Garbo was demanded to pay it under the terms of a verbal agreement. Miss Garbo admitted she was able to pay the money, but invoked the statute of limitations.

Films to Aid Students.
Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 13 (AP)—Motion pictures will enable medical students to see surgical work from the viewpoint of the surgeon instead of from a seat at a distance, the Society of Motion Picture Engineers was told today. Dr. R. Plato Schwartz, of University of Rochester School of Medicine, and Harris B. Tuttle, of Eastman Kodak Co., said a photographer, by using color film, positioned to artificial light and a telephoto lens, can take pictures over the surgeon's shoulder that will reproduce the operation in the same colors, size and perspective as the surgeon sees his own work.

Mosley Defies Reds To Break Up Party

London, Oct. 13 (AP)—Sir Oswald Mosley, leader of British Fascists, tonight defied the Communist Party to break up his organization.

Scoring the suggestion that his "lads" part with their black-shirt uniforms, as demanded by the Communist Party in a note to Home Secretary Sir John Simon, Sir Oswald declared:

"Let them (the Communists) go crying until the government passes such a measure."

The Communist Party note, which also asked the government to close the doors of 500 Fascist Party branches throughout the United Kingdom, probably will be considered by the cabinet tomorrow, along with complaints about Fascist "rowdies" from other sources.

Quake Rocks Honduras.
Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Oct. 13 (AP)—Yawning cracks in the earth in La Leon, a suburb, sent panicky families fleeing from their homes today. A number of buildings was damaged, and a long stretch of highway was destroyed. No casualties had been reported.

Morgenstern, Sr., Honored.
New York, Oct. 13 (AP)—Henry Morgenstern, Sr., former United States Ambassador to Turkey, has been decorated with the Order of the Yugoslav Crown, first class, announced today. The announcement comes Mr. Morgenstern's "active sympathy for the Yugoslavs ever since the days of the Balkan wars and during the World War, greatly aiding the Serbians in those trying days."

Ship Bombing Foiled.
Marseille, Oct. 13 (AP)—Customs guards frustrated an attempt to blow up the Spanish sailboat Calapi at the docks of this French port today. The guards discovered a charge of high explosive just in time to avert the blast. Police immediately began an investigation to discover those responsible for the bombing attempt.

But if he jogged over and followed the Slave, his enemies might pick him up, swoop upon him along some lonely reach, and shoot him out of the air.

Of the two dangers, the country and that pack, he chose the country.

To break the monopoly for Harla, who was getting tired and restless, he suggested: "Would you like to sell me for a ways? Strap told me that you handle a stick quite well."

Gay Round of Events Planned for Visiting Horsemen During Inter-American Competition Here Next Week

Wives Are Accompanying Officers to District for Big Show.

Ambassadors of Chile and Mexico to Give Teams Parties.

By Jessie Ash Arnold.

Parties both official and unofficial will keep members of the Inter-American Horse Show teams jumping next week at almost as strenuous a pace as will their horses. The Chilean and United States Army teams will arrive Friday afternoon, accompanied by their wives. The Chileans, who come from Governors Island, N. Y., where they have been staying since they reached this country, September 24, will be greeted with pomp and ceremony. Awaiting them at the Union Station at 2:30 will be the Ambassador of Chile, Senor Don Manuel Trucco, and members of the Embassy staff, the United States Army Band, Col. Jonathan Wainwright, commandant of Fort Myer; Col. Alexander M. Miller, representing the Chief of Cavalry and Maj. Frank L. Whitaker, chairman of the Inter-American show. The American Army team, several members of which are coming by motor from Fort Riley, Kans., so as to have their cars with them while they are in the East, will not be officially greeted because they are not all coming together.

Many informal parties have been given for the Chilean visitors by officers at Governors Island and their wives during their stay at the post. Capt. Eduardo Yanez and his charming wife, who were here last season, will be welcomed by friends in Washington whom they made at that time. Others in the group include Lieut. and Senora de Perez, Lieut. and Senora de Monti, Lieut. and Senora de Izurieta and Senor Alejandro Bustamante.

Among the functions to be given in honor of the teams will be a luncheon in the Pan American Union October 20 and the official dance of the horse show Saturday, October 24.

The Ambassador of Chile and the Ambassador of Mexico, Senor Don Francisco Castillo Najera, who is returning from Mexico in time for the event, have both accepted invitations to receive the official representatives of their countries' teams on different days of the show, and will entertain at their embassies for team members.

The American Army team, which is by no means least interesting of the three participating in the inter-American show, although its arrival will be attended with no ceremony, will include Maj. J. T. Cole, team captain; Maj. Hiram E. Tuttle, Capt. Milo H. Matteson, Lieut. Raymond W. Curtis, Lieut. Franklin E. Wing, Jr., and Lieut. James C. Curtis, Jr. The two officers by the same name are not related to each other, by the way.

Included among the horses will be Dakota and Don and Ugly, which placed fourth in the Prize of Nations jumping event in competition with 29 countries in the Olympics last summer.

The horses of the Chilean team will be brought from Governors Island in United States Army vans, which will deliver them to the brand new quarters at the Meadowbrook Show Grounds and then hurry back to the station to call for the United States Army horses which are also to be quartered there. Horses of the Mexican team which have been at Fort Myer for several weeks and have been schooled there also will be taken to the new show grounds this weekend.

Four of the nine Chilean horses were here last year, among them Xyane, which gave such a sensational performance in the touch and out event.

De Chambruns Sail To Home in France

Count and Countess Rene de Chambrun, who have been in this country several weeks, will sail today on the Normandie to return to Paris.

Count de Chambrun, son of Count and Countess Adolphe de Chambrun, the latter being the former Sarah Longworth, sister of the late Speaker of the House, Mr. Nicholas Longworth. His wife is the former Miss Jose Laval, daughter of the former French premier, Pierre Laval.

On the same boat will go Senor Juan Francisco de Cardenas, Spanish Ambassador to France, who was named Ambassador to this country just before the Spanish revolution broke out.

Lieut. A. D. Clark, Formerly at Naval Academy, Among Appointees.

Summer, the time when the Navy changes stations of its officers, has taken its toll in Washington, with many men scattered as far as the West coast, Florida and the Asiatic fleet.

The Merry Whirl

By MARYLYN.

Anis Azer, who only recently has taken up his duties as charge d'affaires of the Egyptian Legation, very definitely likes modern jazz, and the version one hears in Washington. He was out dining and dancing at El Patio the other evening with an attractive blonde. When not dancing, they sat and listened attentively to the orchestra.

Little Betty Feldman has in her wardrobe a plaid skirt—not just an ordinary plaid is it, either. It is a real Black Watch kiltie and its lovely blue and green pleats swirl and sway to the tune of 8 yards around. This is one of the things that accompanied the young miss when she returned with her mother from England. She also is the proud possessor of a monocle, and Decio de Moura had better take care, for he has a rival. Betty pops the bit of glass in, and has no more trouble than an average little girl has playing jack or basketball.

Luis Olivares, erstwhile secretary of the Spanish Embassy, was driving slowly up Nineteenth street when we saw him at noon yesterday. He was thoroughly enjoying the gorgeous day, drinking in the clear, chilled and refreshing air and looking with admiration at the trees and their tawny leaf-frocks. We bet he is an artist and really appreciates beautiful colors and their blending.

Mary Dwight and her mother, Mrs. John Henry Dwight, took time out from trousseau shopping for a midday snack just as the same idea appealed to us. Mrs. Dwight was wearing all-black, with diamond clips at the neck, while Mary's costume of henna frock and brown hat was completed with a light tweed topcoat.

Catherine McKane should have lived in the time of Mary Queen of Scots, so vastly becoming are the styles of those days. She was wearing a modified version out tea dancing. The black crepe frock and a very high neck, which was still further heightened by a dainty white ruff. She and her escort, whom we didn't recognize, were joined between dances by Mrs. Mattie Wyatt Porter, attired in a gay plaid frock, and other friends.

The Ray Muirs are all excited about their newest possession, and a good-sized one at that. It is an adorable little Dutch colonial home "way out Massachusetts avenue extended. The present Muir domicile is shortly to become the scene of much packing up and discarding and they will be in the new house within a couple of weeks.

A bevy of pretty young girls having luncheon at Pierre's yesterday included the Patterson sisters—Zoe Schister, wearing blue and gray blocked wool and a saucy hat with an equally saucy feather in it, and Olga, who is kept busy being hostess for her father, the Cuban Ambassador. She had on a honey-colored coat and a mere scrap of a hat perched atop her platinum curls. With them were Rebecca Trucco, the smallest of the trio of daughters of the Chilean Envoy, in gray and vivid green, and Florence Harris, in a coffee-colored tulle with a small off-the-face hat of dark brown and a luxurious fox scarf.

At the next table sat the German Secretary, Gustav Struve, and his blonde wife, who was stunning in her red and green Alolan costume.

The bewildering circles and the avenues shooting off at absurd angles hold no fears for Herr Hans Thomsen, newcomer to the German Embassy. With his chauffeur at his side he reconnoiters about the city at a leisurely pace in his big gleaming top-down car. We saw him at dusk exploring the downtown neighborhood.

Edmund Randolph Laine, the rector, will assist Dr. Stokes.

Miss Eleanor Coonley, sister of the bride-to-be, will be maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Alice B. Riggs, of Stockbridge, and Mrs. John McL. Simpson, of Lake Forest, Ind. Mr. Aldus Chapin, of Washington, nephew of Mr. Higgins, will serve as page, and Mr. Henry D. Tucker, of New Bedford, Mass., will be best man.

The bride-to-be and her family are now in Stockbridge.

Mrs. Dorothy Canfield Fisher, well known novelist, and Miss Isabella Ross, author of the best seller, "Ladies of the Press," were honor guests yesterday at the weekly luncheon of the Women's National Press Club at the Willard. Mrs. Fisher and Miss Ross addressed the members after luncheon.

Plane Hostess Advises as to Dress And Makeup for Travel Via Air Lines

Feminine Riders in Sky
Increase From 3 to 36
Per Cent in 4 Years.

Walking in Craft.

By Ethel Ehlen.

WOMEN are becoming air-minded—statistics prove it. Hazel Cochran, one of the first eight girls to be appointed stewardesses on the United Air Lines, says that from an average of 3 per cent (one woman a week) four years ago, to 36 per cent today, is the rapid advance in feminine air travelers. The majority of these are business and professional women.

In addition to her duties as hostess, the petite Miss Cochran made a study of beauty aids and correct attire for airplane travel, becoming a counselor to the many women who profited by her advice, later drifting into a connection with the Dorothy Gray Salons. Noticing that women either had to alight from a plane without remarking their complexions or plough through their luggage for the necessary creams, lotions and the like, she originated a compact alligator case containing all needed cosmetics for a "new face," a large mirror and coin purse. It is a smart top-handle affair and can take the place of a handbag if desired.

Low Heels Advised.

"Wear low-heeled shoes when air-traveling," Miss Cochran advised; "they are not only more comfortable for long trips, but when walking in the plane you can keep your balance better than when wearing high heels." A comfortable hat is another requisite; tight-fitting hats cause passengers to become irritable. A simple frock which doesn't wrinkle easily, topped by a chic coat which is removed upon entering the plane, completes the modern ensemble for air-commuting. All of the current popular magazines are available for plane travelers, but recently the majority of passengers, both men and women, have scorned these for their own copies of "Gone With the Wind," Miss Cochran reports. Women traveling by plane for the first time, she volunteered, invariably imitate more-seasoned air travelers. When luncheon or dinner is served, they usually refuse the fare, but after seeing other passengers dining with nonchalance, they change their minds and asked to be served.

Hostess for Four Years.

Flying since the age of 16, Miss Cochran naturally is a strong advocate for air travel. She has been an air hostess for four years and has the remarkable record of more than 500,000 miles without ever having a forced landing. "Flying by night with the moon and stars as the only illumination, while viewing the apparent 'toy town' lighted cities below, is an enviable experience," this young air-stewardess enthusiastically explained. If you are interested in becoming a hostess on a plane, here are the qualifications: A graduate nurse, not more than 25 years old, not more than 5 feet 3½ inches high or weighing more than 120 pounds. Between enthusiastic discourses about flying, Miss Cochran gave some new beauty hints adaptable to both air and land complexion. "Fluff your face powder on with a clean piece of cotton and then pat it in place with the palm of the hand. Massage your nourishing cream into your skin, don't merely apply it haphazardly and expect good results. Tie up your spare chin with a strap especially made for the purpose, after carefully massaging it from the throat upward. For a hurried remake of the complexion, use a quick cleansing lotion rather than cleansing cream or soap and water." Miss Cochran will be in the cosmetic department of a local store all of this week to answer your beauty problems.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By
Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Make Room for Air.

The cry of the one with a plugged nose is "Give me air." Of course we can breathe through the mouth, but that is not nature's way. If we take both food and air via the oral cavity we compel that avenue to do double duty. Not the nose was built for respiration, to strain out dust, to supply moisture, and to "condition" the air. If deformities are present anywhere along this normal passageway trouble is bound to follow. We might just as reasonably use the nose as a highway for food as the mouth for breathing.

What are some of these obstructions? Let us consider one type that is fairly common—namely, polyps. Clinicians have reported their recognition in about 5 per cent of all patients—growths that are sufficiently sizable or numerous to produce symptoms. The decade at which they occur most frequently is between 20 and 30, although they do form in young persons, particularly in those of high school age.

Caused by Irritation.

What are polyps? They are outgrowths of the mucous lining of the air passages and arise from the coverings of the nasal bones or from the interior of the sinuses. Now and then a solitary mass will be found in an antrum (the hollow space within the cheek bone). Ordinarily they are broken in appearance, they resemble an oyster or the gulf of a grape. In some patients they may be so large that they can be observed hanging down at the back of the throat or even protruding from the nostrils.

In size they may vary from that of a pinhead to 5 inches or more in length with a diameter of an inch. If they are attached by a stem (pedicle) they may move back and forth with each respiration.

Copyright, 1936, by the Chicago Tribune. New York News Syndicate, Inc.

Fashions in beauty and clothes are of paramount importance to the woman who travels by plane. The ribbed woolen coat above with unique Persian lamb collar and spirited hat of black velvet is the last word in air travel chic.

Says Women Can't Manage Trains

Can you manage the train of your evening dress with ease and grace? If not, then possibly it's because you're an American. Criticism of how American women wear evening dresses—and manage their trains—is heard frequently abroad, according to the London correspondent of Women's Wear. She writes: "Our latest critic on this subject makes his arraignment on the American deficiency in evening clothes in re the matter of trains. He points out that in a London group the American woman can be spotted at once by the awkwardness with which she manages a train. The abashed clutching of it or heedless kicking of it is unknown to the Englishwoman; she knows how to walk in it with grace and is oblivious of its following her on the ground.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Oct. 13. OUR BIG DEBUTANTE season is now bursting open with a crash as of a falling tray of champagne glasses. Mothers are affret, daughters are a-dither, and the town's "stags" are laying in a stock of white ties and practicing their best-bored looks in store windows.

Hundreds of maidens of the upper crust are about to be tossed to the social lions, and a close inspection of many of them leads me to believe that they are a better than average crop. Society girls are definitely getting prettier—they go in more for active sports than did their elders. Our Gloria Baker and Honey Johnson and Priscilla St. George and Dorothy Fell are far tastier than most of the girls who exhibit their pulchritude for pay in the Broadway night-spots.

The arrival of the deb-hurling season was made official by Cholly Knickerbocker's annual list of "don'ts" for mammas. This able and tough chatter tries to keep mothers from overenthusiastically pushing their daughters into the whirlpool. Here are a few of his maxims: Don't your daughter overlook her party calls, or send her into the ballroom overdressed or underdressed, or let her wear too many jewels, or fail to have a list of invited guests at the door in order to weed out the mob of "crashers." My favorite of all, however, is "Don't fail to keep the Grade C and Grade D debutantes at a safe distance." That somehow epitomizes, to me, the whole rummy business of debbing!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN — There's always something to worry about here, and I wonder we got anything done at all! For a long time we fretted about the rattling old trolley cars that slowed up the town tempo, and now that most of them are gone we are in a pet about the nasty old fumes the buses give off. Why, we've even had a learned grand jury sitting on the matter, and if they can indict a gas amudge it will be the neatest trick in years! . . . Speaking of buses, you must rush right over for a ride on the new ones just put in service on Fifth avenue. Big, green double-deckers. The drivers and conductors have new musical comedy uniforms, too, of which they are very vain . . .

The maidens along our snootier canyons are largely agog over the report that handsome David Nivens, Merle Oberon's British boy-friend, is going to visit us. Dave cut a large dash among the girls here before going into the flickers, and some commentators predict that he will again be attentive to a young lady he left lorn and lamenting when he headed West to make some of that nice movie cash. Merle, honey, you'd better come, too! . . .

Mother Holding Job Confronts Complex Task

Danger of Losing Contact
for Extra Effort.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THE WOMAN who has a job to hold down and a family to rear has a far more complex problem to work out than the woman who has either a career or a family alone to consider. For the sake of a living she must work at her job. She cannot push it to one side because a child is ill or hurt.

There is always the danger of her becoming so absorbed in her work as to forget her responsibility to the children. This is especially true if there is someone—mother, husband or maid—who is trustworthy and able to assume entire care of the children.

The children are physically looked after, but none can know what effect it has on them to possess a mother who is yet not a mother save in name.

They cannot understand the need for her working so hard and being so preoccupied. They see other children whose mothers have time and energy to go out with them or play and talk with them. They feel themselves neglected and pushed aside. There seems no place for them in the world.

In time they are apt to resent their mother's work, and in the end the mother is, by force of circumstances, cut off from her children.

A woman who must work for a living must consciously so order her life as to have time to know and be with her youngsters. She cannot, like other events, trust to the natural course of events to bring her children and herself into contact with each other.

She must deliberately set aside a part of every day, a day of every week and every week in the month for playing with or going out with her children so that she helps them more.

During these times she must give herself unreservedly, forgetting business and worries and trying only to establish new and stronger points of contact with her children.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

For Children's Sake, Wife Has Long Been Complaisant to Unfaithful Husband; Asks What to Do Now.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a problem which I am incapable of solving. I am 35 years of age and have the average amount of good looks and intelligence. I am considered a good housekeeper and mother. My husband is 40. We have two children, 10 and 12 years of age. Since the second year of our marriage my husband has been associating with other women.

At one time we were on the verge of separating. But we decided to patch things up to make a home for the children. Since that time we have gotten along as well or better than the average married couple, solely because of my determination to keep a pleasant home for the children.

My health is not good and my husband is considerate of me. He tells me frequently that he loves me and the children more than anything else in the world—when I am good to him, which means when I treat him as if he were a perfect husband; when I overlook all his faults and accept his infidelity and indifference as if they were virtues. I have honestly tried to do this, but when he comes to me straight from another woman's arms (a fact, not a figment of my imagination) it takes all my will power to be other than cold and unresponsive to him.

Please tell me—should I, as I have heard others advise, "sit tight" and act as though I were unaware of his shortcomings; dismiss from my mind any thought of the "other woman"? Or should I let him see that I am hurt and worried by his degrading actions? Please tell me how to act toward him.

WAITING.

Let Sleeping Dogs Lie.

DEAR WAITING: Why not let sleeping dogs lie? That time you were on the verge of separating, when you decided to "patch things up" for the children's sake, you made a choice which seems to be working out well enough, so far as their happiness and economic security is concerned. You say that since that decision was reached, you have been "getting along as well or better than the average couple," and that your husband frequently says he loves you and the children "more than anything else on earth."

I must admit that, from my point of view, you are paying a pretty heavy price for family security in forcing yourself to respond convincingly to your husband's "evening make-up," when you know he comes to you "straight from another woman's arms," but could you purchase the same security for your children on any other terms? Could you separate from your husband and make an equally happy home for them through your own efforts, supplemented by a possible alimony income from their father?

I doubt it, for this reason: They are just at the age when the breakup of their home would spell black doom cracking over their hapless heads. If a break is made between husband and wife who are also parents, it should be made either when the children are so young that the elimination of one parent from the scene is like a happening in a dream; or it should be postponed until the children are old enough and mature enough to look at the break through their parents' eyes and philosophically accept and adjust to a move which presumably makes for the two parents' greater happiness.

Where any workable compromise is possible, parents have an obligation in conscience to pay the price of that compromise in personal pain; not to visit the pain on the children's hearts. You put your hand to the plow of workable compromise some years back and I believe the kindest thing you can do for your children is to go on as you have been doing. Try to dismiss from your mind all thought of other women, and let it be your own heart's secret that you are hurt and worried, and that you consider your position degrading.

Letters For Peggy.

NOTE TO "MATT": Your letter has been forwarded to the young lady whose letter, signed "Peggy," was published in this column October 9. Letters from other correspondents who wished to establish communication with her have also been sent to her home address. I have advised her to take her parents or some other older person whose judgment she can trust into her confidence, before admitting any of these unknowns into her circle of intimate friends. This bit of advice was not intended as a reflection on the character or social desirability of any who wrote. But I believe a girl of 21 years needs to be very careful and discriminating in her choice of friends, and her judgments need to be confirmed by some wise and protective older person who knows the pitfalls which exist to trip up the socially indiscreet.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Pumpkin Pie and Beans Originated by Bay State

Autumn Leaves Remind That Delicious Dessert Is in Season; Recipes Today Include Brown Bread and Codfish.

By Elizabeth E. Poe.

STRAKES of burnt sienna, gleaming yellow and brown on autumn leaves, the crisp of frosty mornings and gardens bright in the last brave colors of fall tell their story that the time for pumpkin pie is here.

And pumpkin pie reminds us of the culinary delights enjoyed by Pilgrim and Puritan on the gray Massachusetts shores of the Old Bay State. These Pilgrim fathers and mothers brought something besides faith and courage with them from the English homeland. They brought the tradition of English cookery, the good old meats, steamed puddings and pork pies of Merrie England, Yorkshire pudding and all the rest of it. Naturally, they modified their cooking habits to suit the strange new food they discovered through Indian visitors or found on the rock-bound coast. One of these was the material for pumpkin pie.

Pumpkin Pie.

Here is a good recipe for a New England pumpkin pie:

1/2 to 2/3 cup light brown sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ginger
1/4 teaspoon cloves
1/4 cup milk
1/4 cup medium cream

Cook the pumpkin over low heat to evaporate the moisture before measuring. Mix the sugar, salt, and spices and stir into the pumpkin. Stir in the unbeaten egg and mix thoroughly. Stir in the milk and cream slowly.

Pour this mixture into the pastry shell, being sure to not fill the shell too full. Set the pie in the bottom of a hot oven (425 F.); bake for 20 minutes or until the pastry is cooked on the bottom. Remove to a shelf in the center of the oven; reduce the heat to 325 F. Bake until the mixture will not adhere to the point of a knife inserted in the center, or about 25 minutes longer.

No discussion of the native dishes of Massachusetts would be complete without mention of baked beans and codfish cakes. The true Bay Stater enjoys his or her baked beans with brown bread best for Sunday morning breakfast. Here is how the beans are prepared for such an occasion:

Bay State Baked Beans.

Early Friday night take a quart of navy or pea beans and soak overnight in cold water. In the morning drain and cover with fresh water containing baking soda. Cook slowly, simmering the beans from 10 to 15 minutes. Drain again and rinse in cold water. Now scald and scrape three-quarters of a pound of salt pork. Cut in thin slices. Four or five beans in the pot, laying a layer of pork every half inch, using the beans to bury

CELERY AND PEANUT BUTTER SOUP.

Remove outside stalks of 1 bunch celery, wash and scrape, if this has not been done, and put through food chopper with 1/2 small onion. Put 3 tablespoons butter in saucepan and when melted, add celery and onion and cook and stir until beginning to brown. Add 4 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon sugar and stir until well mixed. Add 1 1/2 cups boiling water and 2 chicken bouillon cubes. Stir until mixture boils. Add to 1 cup scalded milk.

Mix 4 tablespoons peanut butter with 1-3 cup cold water, when smooth, add to the hot mixture. Strain before serving and, if wished, sprinkle the center of each plate or soup cup with a mixture of 2 tablespoons green celery leaves, cut fine; 1 hard-cooked egg yolk, sifted; skin from 2 radishes, cut fine, and 2 ripe olives chopped fine.

Brown Bread.

Take 1 cup yellow corn meal, 1 cup graham flour, 1 cup rye flour, 1/4 cup molasses, 1 1/2 cups sour milk, 1 teaspoon soda and 1 teaspoon salt.

Mix and sift dry ingredients, and stir in the remaining ingredients. Put rounds of greased paper in bottom of 1-pound baking powder tins. Grease the sides of the tins and fill two-thirds full. Steam two and one-half hours. To steam, place the tins on a rack inside a kettle. Add warm water to half the height of the mold. Cover the kettle and let water come to a boil. Boil gently from one to two hours or until well done. More water may have to be added from time to time.

Seafod plays an important part in all Cape Cod cookery and none more than the sacred cod itself. Cod is to Massachusetts what the herring is to Scotland.

There are many ways of preparing codfish, each of itself promising a delectable meal. The standard is to make it into codfish balls. Try this recipe on your electric range.

Codfish Balls.

1 cup dried codfish
1 egg, well beaten
1/4 cup milk
Soak codfish for about one hour in cold water. Peel and quarter potatoes. Drain codfish and add to potatoes and cover with fresh cold water. Bring to a boil and cook until tender. Drain and mash. Add beaten egg to milk and mix with fish mixture. Drop by tablespoons into hot, deep shortening and cook until brown. Drain and brown paper to remove excess fat.

Food Requirement For Health Stated

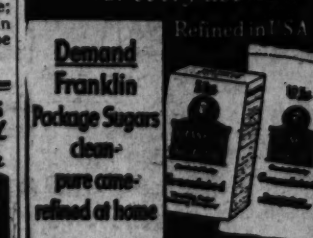

Alice Bradley Specifies Daily Milk Consumption.

Three to five people constitute the average family at the present time. Fruit, cereal, toast and coffee seem to constitute the present American breakfast, except on special occasions or to meet individual needs. These conclusions are reached by Alice Bradley in her new Menu-Cook-Book which is published four times yearly. Miss Bradley's recipes are written for four people.

Menus are arranged by weeks and days of the week. There are special holiday menus for each month and suggestions for delicacies for entertaining.

According to Alice Bradley, certain foodstuffs should be supplied daily for a happy and healthy person. They are: One quart of milk for every adult, 3 servings of vegetables, one of these a leafy vegetable or canned tomato; 2 servings of fruit, one of these raw; 2 servings of whole grain products; 1 serving each of any two of the following, cheese, eggs, meat, fish, dried beans or dried peas. Moderate amounts of sweets and other desirable foods. 2 quarts water plain or in beverages for adults and 1 1/2 quarts water for children. She has kept this in mind in preparing her menus.

Soup Recipe Brings Prize To Mrs. Cook

Ruby Consomme Unusual; Old-Time Vegetable Also Is Winner.

MANY interesting and unusual soup recipes were sent in to The Washington Post soup contest, so entries were judged for their practicality as well as for their practicality. However, the fifth prize was awarded for an excellent recipe for old-time vegetable soup. A good recipe of this type is often difficult to find.

The first prize of $3 was awarded to Mrs. Isabelle L. Cook, 214 Massachusetts avenue northeast, for her recipe of ruby consomme. The second prize of $2 was awarded to Miss Martha W. Williams, 2401 Calvert street, apartment 208, for a recipe of black bean soup. Crab bisque, submitted by Mrs. Blanche Zottoli, 2416 Perry street northeast, won the third prize of $1. Charlotte F. Hiehle, 5021 Tunlaw road northwest, was awarded the $1 fourth prize for her recipe for mushroom chicken soup. The fifth prize of $1 was awarded to Mrs. E. E. Baltimore, Md., for her practical old-time vegetable soup recipe.

Here is Mrs. Cook's unusual recipe:

Ruby Consomme.

1 egg white, beaten
1 teaspoon chives, chopped
1 teaspoon onion, chopped
2 cloves
1 stalk celery, chopped
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Dr. J. W. Hill, Ex-Chancellor Of College, Dies

Was Director of Archeological Society Here and Well Known as Cleric.

By the Associated Press.
New York, Oct. 13.—Dr. John Wesley Hill, 73, retired chancellor of Lincoln Memorial University, died here last night at a hotel, where he was staying while on a visit.

A Methodist clergyman, he formerly was grand chaplain of the Masonic Order in New York. After his retirement as president of Lincoln Memorial University, Cumberland Gap, Tenn., where he had served 20 years, Dr. Hill continued as a trustee with an office in Washington.

He was the father of John Warren Hill, presiding justice of the Court of Domestic Relations here; of Fowler Hill, of the New York Times Staff; and of Mrs. William Mitchell, also of New York.

A native of Kalida, Ohio, he was educated at Ohio Western and was ordained a Methodist minister in 1889, a year after his marriage to Nora Holmes, of Findlay, Ohio. After her death, he married Miss Sadie Harrison Schmidt, of Brooklyn, in 1906. She survives.

Dr. Hill held pastorates in Sprague, Wash.; Ogden, Utah; Helena, Mont.; Minneapolis, where he founded the Fowler Memorial Church; Fostoria, Ohio; and Grace Church, Harrisburg, Pa., before coming to New York.

He was chaplain of the Pennsylvania State Senate in 1900 and in 1908 and 1912 was chaplain of the Republican national conventions. He supplied the pulpit of Marley's Presbyterian Church in London in 1908.

Dr. Hill established the Asiatic branch of the International Peace Forum in 1911, and in 1914 became the first general secretary of the World Court League in the United States.

He was a director of the Archeological Society of Washington and a trustee of the Ohio Society of Washington.

Last February 9 he gave the annual address at the Lincoln Shrine at Redlands, Calif.

Funeral services and burial will be tomorrow at Ada, Ohio.

Bishops Proposed As Lutheran Heads

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 13 (AP)—A memorial from the Texas Synod of the United Lutheran Church proposed today that the biennial convention opening here tomorrow authorize the election of bishops rather than presidents to head the church and its 34 synods.

The election of bishops as synodical and church heads, Lutheran leaders said, would be a return to the practice of the mother church in Germany. It has Episcopal leadership for its synods.

The Brotherhood of the United Lutheran Church ended its three-day convention at Springfield, Ohio, with the election of J. Milton Deck of Philadelphia, Pa., as president, succeeding H. E. Isenhour, of Salisbury, N. C.

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 13 (AP)—Dr. W. E. Schuette, of Sewickley, Pa., was elected to a vice presidency as the American Lutheran Church convention chose 140 officials, including members of boards and committees today.

Dr. Ammanuel Poppen, of Columbus, president of the Ohio district, was re-elected first vice president, and the Rev. O. J. Wilke, of Madison, Wis., previously third vice president, also was re-elected, tying with Dr. Schuette, president of the Eastern district. The Rev. Carl C. Hein, of Columbus, was re-elected president for six years last week.

Labor Will Sponsor Plea for Roosevelt

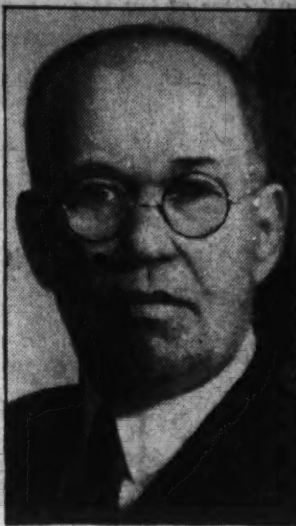

An unusual broadcast urging President Roosevelt's re-election is planned October 31, at 3 p. m., over the American Broadcasting System, it was learned yesterday.

The program, which is sponsored by mechanics of Maryland, Delaware, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York, New Jersey and Michigan, will be in the nature of a last-minute appeal "to all voters in America who work for a living" to cast their ballot for Roosevelt.

It is planned to have ten speakers on the program—a Salvation Army leader, who will tell of the Administration's help to the needy; an American Legion leader, who will tell how CCC camps and Resettlement projects have given work to veterans; a Negro, who will tell of betterment of conditions of his race, and a seaman, an American Federation of Labor leader, a representative of the miners' union, a farmer, a banker, etc., all of whom will describe how they believe the President's program has aided them and the Nation.

Sponsors hope to have John L. Lewis speak as representative of the miners. Names of other speakers were not announced.

Hutchins Reported In Line for Yale

Chicago, Oct. 13 (AP)—The Daily Maroon, student publication at the University of Chicago, said today it had received word from New Haven, Conn., that President Robert Maynard Hutchins "may soon be asked to leave the University of Chicago and assume the presidency of Yale University."

The Daily Maroon said "it has been known for some time that Yale would select a new president this year, since President James R. Angell, now in his 68th year, has reached retirement age."

Dr. Hutchins denied any knowledge of the rumor, the Maroon said, and added he had received no word from Yale. He was out of the city today.

Heart Ailment Proves Fatal To Mr. Stewart

Former Commissioner of Labor Statistics; Funeral Set Tomorrow.

Ethelbert Stewart, 79, statistical expert and former United States Commissioner of Labor Statistics, died of a heart attack yesterday at his home, 1210 Delafield place northwest.

Stewart left the Labor Department in 1932 after he had served continuously with the Government for 45 years.

Born in Chicago in 1857, Mr. Stewart was educated in the public schools there and entered the employ of the Government in 1887 as a special agent of the old Labor Bureau.

In 1912 he was appointed chief statistician of the Children's Bureau and a year afterward was appointed to the corresponding post in the Bureau of Labor Statistics. He remained in that position until 1918. In 1920 he was made commissioner of labor statistics; the position he held until he left the department in 1932.

Mr. Stewart always insisted that he was ousted from the Labor Department because "President Hoover didn't like" his employment figures. Stewart's interpretation of the statistics showed the volume of employment to be going down.

In an interview early this year in Miami, Fla., Mr. Stewart declared that Julius Klein, of the Department of Commerce, "was always saying things were going up." President Hoover and Doak broke with him, Stewart said, and he informed the Labor Secretary that "we hadn't changed our figures to suit any Administration since I'd been in the bureau over a period of 45 years and I'd be damned if I was to do it now."

At the time he left the Labor Department, July 1, 1932, his commission had a year still to run.

Mr. Stewart was the Union Labor nominee for Congress from the Fourteenth Illinois District in 1888. He had been editor of a labor newspaper in Chicago before going to work for the Government.

Surviving are a son, E. W. Stewart, of Chicago, and five daughters, Mrs. A. J. Stewartson, of Huntington, Long Island; Mrs. Zella Stewart, of Chicago; Mrs. M. Stewart, of New York; Miss Margaret W. Stewart, of New York; and Miss Lettie Stewart, all of Washington. He also leaves seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at Hines undertaking establishment tomorrow afternoon. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

PWA Enjoined From Granting Electric Award

West Tennessee Company Obtains Injunction on TVA Charge.

Charging that electrical energy will be produced in a steam-driven generating plant and thus will be placed on a competitive basis with private industry, the West Tennessee Power & Light Co., of Jackson City, Tenn., yesterday obtained a temporary injunction restraining PWA from disbursing $663,000 to enable the town of Jackson City to construct a distribution system for the handling of TVA power.

In a complaint filed in District Court, the company said it had an investment of $1,500,000 in Madison County, Tenn., and that its franchise did not expire until 1938. In the last ten years, the company said, it had reduced its rates 50 per cent.

Even so, it was charged, the city plans to construct a distribution system with Federal funds and will purchase Government-produced power for its citizens. The Tennessee company asserted the power will not be surplus power from Wilson Dam, but will be generated in a steam plant.

Supporting its contention, that the allocation should not be consummated, the company challenged the PWA program as unconstitutional, violative of its rights under the due process clause of the Constitution, and, if actually carried out, would not relieve unemployment since not enough skilled laborers in Jackson City could be found to operate the project and imported labor would have to be utilized.

Dancer Arrested in N.Y.; Termed an Extortionist

Philadelphia, Oct. 13 (AP)—The Federal Bureau of Investigation here revealed tonight that Frank Vitolo, 33-year-old adagio dancer, held in New York, had confessed to sending extortion letters to Mrs. George Horace Lorimer, wife of the former editor of the Saturday Evening Post. Reed E. Vetterli, special agent in charge of the local office, and the letters, addressed March 15 and 21, threatened Mrs. Lorimer unless $5,000 was paid to the writer.

Vitolo was arrested at Yonkers, N. Y. September 30, by a squad directed by J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the F. B. I.

Church Census.

Father Divine will have no difficulty getting into the new church census begun recently by the Bureau of the Census.

The good father, who is God to his followers, has been having quite a bit of trouble with New York City authorities on his finances, but even if he doesn't answer the Bureau of Census questions on the value and indebtedness of his churches, T. J. Murphy, director of the religious census, says Father Divine's name will be included.

Right now Murphy is about one-third through in compiling an index of churches to which census schedules are to be sent early in January. In 1926 there were 213 denominations reporting. This year Murphy expects around 240.

The increase is due in part to the springing up of new religious groups and also to a progressive-conservative split in many established churches. East End churches and their swami priests have grown particularly popular these days. Among the new churches with more colorful names are the Cosmopolitan Church of Liberty, Fellowship of Universal Design of Life, and the Saints Christ's Sanctified Holy Chapel. Americans have a peculiar fancy for alchy names for their churches, Murphy said. Among those recorded in the previous census were The General Six Principle Baptist, the Duck River and Kindred Association of Baptists, the Conservative Dunkers, the Progressive Dunkers, Pillar of Fire, Church of Daniel's Band, Defenseless Menonites and the Two-Seed-in-the-Spirit Predestinarian Baptists.

Tonight Jessica Buck and Edward J. C. will play the "winner-take-all" jackpot poker game when the Railroad Retirement Board Lodge meets.

A. F. C. E. Organizer.

Henry C. Iler, third vice president of the Internal Revenue Club, has been appointed national organizer of the A. F. C. E. Iler plans to swing into his job before the end of the week by going to Philadelphia, where he will try to double the federation membership in that city.

Iler was born in Kentucky 31 years ago, while at the Western Kentucky State Teachers College he served with the Kentucky National Guard and with the R. O. T. C. After several years of business life, he studied law, being admitted to the Georgia bar in 1933. He worked with the Senate Judiciary Investigating Committee. He was a claims examiner at Internal Revenue.

Gravity Indicator.

Donald L. Hay, of the Naval Research Laboratory, has developed a rather ingenious way of weighing the specific gravity of liquids. At present most specific gravity indicators show the weight of the fluid, not the top. When the liquid is virtually all top, this is a k. but where large volumes of liquid are involved, the bottom portion is heavier than the top and the readings are off.

To correct that Hay has patented a new specific gravity indicator which consists of two pipes, one floating in the liquid, the other at the tank bottom. Both tubings connect into a single tube which automatically averages out the two air and liquid readings and gives a single reading which gives the specific gravity for the entire tank.

The Washington Chapter of the Federation of Architects, Technicians and Engineers, is combining the Durand cause and Hallouren in a "Spooks Rally" on October 24 at the Woodmen's Lodge.

Eagles.

The bald-headed eagle may be the national bird, but Dr. H. C. Bryant, of the National Park Service, fears that he is headed for extinction unless he is protected. Bryant is working on a report on the eagle in a report on birth protection among birds that he is to present to the meeting of the American Ornithologists Union in Pittsburgh Monday.

In some Western States eagles are being hunted and killed from airplanes—which makes Dr. Bryant indignant. In Pennsylvania eagles have grown so scarce that the Audubon Society has set aside a Garden of Eden mating place for one male and female eagle. Bryant is pointing out the need for protection from being hunted or heckled. Next to the eagle, Dr. Bryant worries most about ducks.

Bryant will not be the only government bird scientist at the meeting. Victor Cahalane and Joseph O. Benson are also going from the Park Service. Dr. Herbert Friedman, from the Smithsonian Institution, and 12 from Biological Survey. They are Ira N. Gabrielson, W. C. Henderson, Clarence Cottam, F. C. Lincoln, H. C. Oberholser, A. H. Howell, R. W. Williams, Phoebe Knappen, Clarence Smith, May T. Cooke, Allen Duvall and Mary O'Brien.

The minstrel show being put on at St. Stephen's Hall on Friday by the Adjutant General's Office Lodge of the A. F. G. E. will be by no means a strictly amateur affair. Edward J. McGinnis assures us. Among the former professionals who will entertain are Florence Alldin, who has played New York night clubs; Thelma Hardy, a member of the Washington Opera Guild; Rolfe Sauls, who black-faced with Clayton's Minstrels; Milton Jones, who won a barytone radio contest; and Anna O'Connor, tap dancer.

A group hospitalization plan has been adopted by the Social Security Board Union. Donald P. Davis has transferred from Detroit to the Procurement Division here. Local Federal officials who will attend the meeting of the Civil Service Assembly in Cincinnati, starting next Wednesday, are Civil Service Commissioners Harry B. Mitchell and Leonard D. White, Ismar Baruch and L. J. O'Rourke, of the Civil Service Commission; William H. Stead, of the Department of Labor; and Oliver C. Short, of the Bureau of Census.

2 Car Deaths Increase Toll Of Year to 67

One Driver, Is Held for Jury, Another Freed at Inquests.

Trucks Are Barred From Stopping on Streets in Rush Hour.

The District's sixty-seventh traffic fatality for 1936 was recorded yesterday with the death, in Freedmen's Hospital, of Nan Patterson, 47, colored, of the 1300 block of S street northwest.

Earlier in the day Russell Harrison, 36, colored, of the 300 block of Fifty-sixth street northeast, became the sixty-sixth fatality when he died in Casualty Hospital following an auto accident October 7. A coroner's jury held one motorist for session of the grand jury and exonerated another after inquests into two week-end traffic fatalities.

John H. Coblenz, 24, of Middletown, Md., was held in the death Friday night of Mrs. Lauretta Holmbeck, 33, of 3028 Wisconsin avenue.

Driving in Rain.

Testimony before the coroner's jury indicated Coblenz was driving his car during the rainstorm behind a "defective windshield."

The windshield was in "very bad condition," Detective Sgt. William L. Williams, of the Homicide Squad, told the jury. He said the wiper apparently was out of order at the time of the accident, in which Mrs. Holmbeck was killed and her 8-year-old son injured. The accident occurred at Wisconsin avenue and Woodley road.

In the second inquest, Herbert D. Williams, colored, 26, of the 1300 block of Sixth street northwest, was exonerated in the death last Saturday of William Smith, colored, 40, blk. of Fifth street northwest, who was run down by his car.

Two children were injured in automobile accidents in the city. Alice Caponte, 7, of 905 B street southeast, suffered head injuries when the automobile in which she was riding with her father, Placidio Caponte, collided with a street car at Third and H streets northeast. She was taken to Casualty Hospital.

Struck by an automobile at New Jersey avenue and Pierce street northwest, Earl Johnson, 6, colored, of the 100 block of Pierce street, suffered skull and internal injuries. The child was taken to Freedmen's Hospital. Isidore Hodges, 24, of the 1400 block of Pennsylvania avenue southeast, driver of the car, was held by police.

Rosie Lee Jones, 29, colored, of the 7100 block of Fourth street northwest, suffered skull injuries and cuts on her head when she was struck by a hit-and-run driver at Fourth street and G place northwest last night. She was taken to Casualty Hospital by a passing motorist. Physicians said her condition was serious.

Meanwhile, commercial vehicles were prohibited from stopping or parking to load or unload merchandise between 8 and 9 a. m. on a dozen downtown streets under an order adopted by the District Commissioners.

List of Streets.

The ban applies to the flow sides of the following streets: South side of Pennsylvania avenue from Twentieth to Sixteenth streets; south side of H street from Eighteenth to Fourth street; south side of I street from Twentieth to Thirteenth street; south side of K street from Twentieth to Thirteenth street; south side of Vermont avenue from Massachusetts avenue to H street; east Fifteenth street from K street to Pennsylvania avenue; Sixth street from Pennsylvania avenue to Vermont street; Vermont street from Massachusetts avenue to H street; east Fifteenth street from K street to Pennsylvania avenue; Fourth street from Thomas Circle to Pennsylvania avenue; Thirteenth street from Massachusetts avenue to G street; Vermont street from Massachusetts avenue to H street; in recommending the ban, pointed out that parking of passenger cars during rush hours is prohibited on the flow sides of these thoroughfares.

Detectives Show Intricate Wrinkles of Crime Solution to City's Attorneys

A record gathering of nearly 500 attended the meeting of the District Bar Association at the Holmwood last night, attracted by a crime exhibit of the Metropolitan Police Department.

The lawyers examined an exhibit of the Treasury Department showing scientific methods of detecting differences in handwriting and type-writing, together with instances in which these methods were put to practical use.

Most of the members had themselves fingerprinted according to the best police department method, and then passed on to an examination of the exhibit. Since officers of the American Bar Association also are ex officio representatives, the local group will have at least six representatives in the lower body of the American Association parliamentary group.

At the Bar Association meeting, it was voted to send two delegates, chosen by the board of directors, to sit in the newly created house of representatives of the American Bar Association. Since officers of the American Bar Association also are ex officio representatives, the local group will have at least six representatives in the lower body of the American Association parliamentary group.

Bar Group Unit Votes to Join Justice League

The executive council of the Federal Bar Association, which met last night in the office of its chairman, Justin Miller, at the Department of Justice, voted unanimously to recommend that the association join the Washington Criminal Justice Association.

The matter was referred to the budget committee of the bar group for decision as to the type of membership to be taken. The following members of the council attended: Miller, Roy Vallance, of the State Department; John Vance, law librarian of the Library of Congress; Maj. Wallace Streator, of the general counsel's office, Bureau of Internal Revenue; John Remy, of the Solicitor General's office; Heber Rice, of the Home Owner's Loan Corporation; George A. Warren, of the Interior Department; Heber Rice of the War Department; David D. Caldwell, Department of Justice; Roy Stockman, Interstate Commerce Commission; Col. Hugh Smith, War Department; and Kenneth H. Bruner, General Accounting Office.

Two Lieutenants Named White House Navy Aids

Lieut. Thomas H. Hederman, now at the Bureau of Navigation and Lieut. William H. Watson, junior grade of the Naval Communications Office, have been assigned as aids to the White House, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

Lieut. Hederman has been on duty at the Navy Department since June, 1935, while Lieut. Watson reported for his present duty in May of this year.

'India Rubber Man' But Little Injured In 55-Foot Plunge

At any rate, Charles H. Fisher, 38, of the 500 block of H street northwest, was working 55-feet above the waters, on a scaffold which swung from the Anacostia bridge yesterday.

He slipped, and his body went twisting and hurtling into space. Mayflower last night, attracted by the autumn sunlight, below.

Rescuers expected Fisher to be badly hurt. He was rushed to Gallinger Hospital. Physicians examined him. They found no fractures, and said he was merely bruised and shocked. After first aid, Fisher went home.

Boy Is Beaten Defending Dog From Catchers

Clifton Plummer, 17-year-old messenger boy, whose heart is too big for his 100-pound body, was sent to Emergency Hospital for treatment of a gash over his eye and a chipped front tooth because he protested the seizure by dog catchers of Sporty, everybody's dog.

A truck from the dog pound, manned by four husky men, pulled up at Connecticut avenue and S street northwest yesterday on complaint of a nearby resident that Sporty, just a plain dog, owned by Frank Brown, colored flower vender, of 1778 Willard street northwest, was a nuisance.

Sporty was terrified when dog catchers tried to put him in the wagon. At this moment the messenger boy observed the dog's plight and said to the poundmen, "How would you like to be treated like that?"

According to witnesses, Clyde Underwood, 41, of 918 Fourteenth street southeast, dashed at Plummer, knocking him to the pavement. Plummer got up only to have Underwood allegedly strike him a blow over the eye, causing a gash that took three stitches to mend and chipping a front tooth.

Onlookers rushed to his aid as Underwood fled. F. L. Marks, 600 Emerson street northwest, ordered the truck to drive on. The Third Precinct scout car took the boy to Emergency Hospital. "The boy's only crime," his mother, Mrs. Minnie Plummer, said at his home, 4300 Reed terrace southeast, "was that he likes pets."

Clifton has a black shepherd dog named King and a blue-gray maltese cat who answers to Maltie.

A report of the affair was made by Marks to the Commissioners. He admitted asking Underwood if "he had any trouble," but said, "I was in my seat in the front of the wagon and heard someone say I wish the dog would bite you. Then I got out and saw the boy on his knees. I told him he had better mind his own business and ordered the wagon to drive on."

Underwood, then, informed me that the boy had interfered or 'annoyed' him while in the performance of his duty."

Search for Tate Abandoned: He 'Does Not Exist'

Man Hunted Three Months in Shooting of O'Brien; Six Now Free on Bail.

A three-month search for Jack ("Legs") Tate as the last of the gang of racketeers who shot down Joseph Edward O'Brien, described by police as a "small-time South-east bootlegger," was ended yesterday when police announced there was no such person as Tate.

The case had been kept open since O'Brien was the opening of the case would be presented to the grand jury as soon as it was possible to move O'Brien.

O'Brien, who is confined to his home with both legs shattered by three bullets, will be unable to walk again, physicians at Providence Hospital said.

The shooting, according to police, occurred after O'Brien is alleged to have tried to expand his liquor running activities from the southeast to the northwest section.

Cox said he was told a seventh man was in the car the night O'Brien was shot. The man was supposed to be Tate. Investigation, however, has failed to disclose any one by that name, Cox said.

School Heads Defend Methods; Seek to Correct 'Mirror-Minds'

Left-Handed Pupils Slip Into Reverse Mental Trends Despite Every Precaution, However, Advocates of 'New-Fangled' Plan Admit.

Despite every precaution taken by teachers, minds of left-handed children in the District public schools continue to slip into reverse, school officials admitted yesterday.

But the officials hastened to deny that their progressive system of teaching reading by the "thought-unit method" encourages the development of "mirror minds" as charged by Dr. Paul J. Ewerhardt, director of the Child Guidance Clinic and an advocate of the old-fashioned phonetic teaching method.

Even youngsters who have been given individual instruction in the phonetic method will pick up their pencils in their left hand and confidently copy "W-A-S" as "S-A-W," according to Miss Bertie Backus, principal of the Alice Deal Junior High School, and formerly director of the character education experiment.

"While the character education experiment was under way last year," said Miss Backus, "we even found cases of reversal in the high schools. Our study revealed that about 12 per cent of the pupils selected at random were reading disability cases. Not all of these children had 'mirror minds,' but cases of reversal were not at all uncommon."

As a precaution against the development of "mirror minds"—a strange mental quirk which results in reading words and sentences backwards—teachers now are taught never to attempt to force a left-handed child to write with his right hand, Assistant Superintendent of Schools Robert L. Haycock said.

Haycock pointed out that educators long ago learned that left-handed children are born to use their left hands and efforts to force them to use right hands for writing cause mental confusion which may result in "mirror mindedness."

Both Haycock and Miss Backus insisted that the majority of children learn to read more quickly under the "thought-unit method" than they do under the old-fashioned "phonetic method."

Teachers in the public schools still resort to the phonetic method—teaching reading through an understanding of word sounds—when they encounter children who cannot comprehend the more modern method of teaching units of language instead of individual words, Haycock said.

All left-handed children are not susceptible to mirror-mindedness and right-handed children are not immune, Haycock and Ewerhardt emphasized. It is only children who suffer emotional difficulties or who develop a sense of frustration whose minds slip into reverse.

Personal Tax Fight Taken To High Court

William S. Cogger Calls Act Unconstitutional, Discriminatory.

Appealing to the United States Supreme Court for a review of lower court rulings, William S. Cogger, member of the District bar, yesterday resumed his fight to have the District's personal property tax declared unconstitutional.

Basing his fight chiefly on the assertion the tax was discriminatory because it was in legal effect "class taxation," Cogger asked the Supreme Court to review rulings by the United States Court of Appeals and the District Court, both of which had sustained the right of the District Commissioners to compel the filing of personal property returns to be used in levying taxes on that type of property.

Cogger, through Attorneys John E. Hughes and Philip F. Higgins, asserted the personal property tax act exempted members of Congress from its provisions, even though they moved to this city and brought with them "untold wealth." In addition, members of the President's Cabinet are exempted.

Cogger was called upon to furnish a list of taxable personal property, and when he refused, the Commissioners filed action to compel him to file one. Since then, Cogger has steadfastly refused to file the return on the grounds the law was discriminatory and therefore unconstitutional.

In asking a review he said a wealthy man could be elected Senator, move to Washington and thereby escape personal taxes. No action was taken on the Cogger petition, which took the form of a petition for a writ of certiorari.

Tech Roms Over Gonzaga, 31-6, Looms as Series Title Threat

Victors Show New-Found Power

Early Bad Breaks Hurt Losers; Williamson, Belote Look Good.

McKinley Aerial Attack Good; Fundamentals Need Attention.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Tech High dedicated its new gridiron with five touchdowns and a 31-6 conquest of Gonzaga High yesterday while 3,000 cheering students from both schools lined the stadium.

It was the first game between Tech and Gonzaga in four years and Tech proceeded to make it its second win of the season. The Maroon has lost to Baltimore City College and Episcopal High but defeated George Washington High of Alexandria.

The decisive score of yesterday's triumph was a big surprise, bringing out the unexpected fact that Tech has somewhere uncovered enough power to make it a big worry to Central's inter-high champs in the forthcoming inter-high series. Central has a tough job beating Gonzaga, 14 to 6, while the best Eastern could do was to win, 13-12.

Breaks Hurt Gonzaga.

Jack Belote, a fast, triple-threat quarterback, and John Williamson, a Golden Gloves boxer who also packs a big punch when he runs, scored two touchdowns apiece for Tech and Kirby Foams took a pass from Stanley Wells for the other. The Tech passing was enough to cause Central some apprehensive moments and with a little improved blocking, the Tech running attack should match it.

A series of bad breaks set Gonzaga back in the first minute of play. A punt by Sonny Hartman went straight up in the air and, aided by 20 yards of penalties, Tech had the ball on the Purple's 20-yard line. Belote then raced 20 yards around end to the touchdown. Williamson's place-kick was wide.

Gonzaga, showing plenty of fight, staved off a Tech touchdown after the Maroon had a first down on the 1-yard line. Tech scored again in the same quarter, however, when Wells flipped a pass to Foams in the end zone to net 21 yards and a touchdown. Williamson again missed his place-kick.

A fumble by Harry Heiberger, of Gonzaga, was recovered by Connolly. Tech end, on the Gonzaga 10-yard line in the second quarter and Wells passed to Williamson for the third touchdown.

Williamson Looks Good.

Gonzaga scored in the third quarter after a 60-yard march featuring by dazzling reverses with Sonny Hartman contributing some flashy runs and Buddy O'Brien passing twice to Jack Roney for good gains. Hartman finally went over from the 1-yard line.

Belote scored Tech's fourth touchdown in the last quarter after passing to Foams for a 24-yard gain to put the ball on the Gonzaga 8-yard line. On the next play, Belote tore through tackle for the score.

Williamson made his place-kick this time and then led a 40-yard march for the final score. One of the hardest running backs to be seen here in years, he ripped over for the fifth touchdown from the 4-yard line a few minutes before the game ended.

Al Houghton to Be Appointed to Post at Bannockburn Club

Sylvester Will Remain as Pro; Announcement Is Due Soon.

Al Houghton, outstanding among Washington golf professionals of the past dozen years, will return to the Capital in an official capacity with the Bannockburn Club, it was learned by The Post yesterday.

R. K. Aten, chairman of the house committee of the Bannockburn Club, partially confirmed the report last night when he said the affiliation of Houghton with the club was under consideration and that an announcement would be made within a few days.

In the entry list announced yesterday for the Maryland State Open tournament which begins today at the Manor Club, Houghton's name appears as representative of the Bannockburn Club.

Houghton's affiliation with Bannockburn will not affect the status of Tony Sylvester as professional. It was said.

"Sylvester will be the pro at Bannockburn as long as the present directors of the club are in charge," said Aten, "and all members of the club are in perfect accord with the directors."

Houghton, it is believed, will assume a post akin to the general management of the Bannockburn Club with a view to restoring Bannockburn to the forefront among local golf clubs, a position it formerly held.

Several years ago the Bannockburn Club discarded its identity as a private club and adopted the policy of a semi-public course.

Houghton, a graduate of Washington amateur ranks and former amateur champion of the District, for several years was the pro at the Kenwood Club. Under his regime, Kenwood rapidly took a place among the most popular clubs in the Capital area.

Last year, Houghton moved to the Indian Spring as general manager of that club, but resigned a few months later to accept a post as professional at the Cavalier Club at Virginia Beach, Va.

Following the end of the summer season at Virginia Beach, Houghton returned to the Capital and has been a daily figure on local courses.

Eagles Bolstered For St. John's Tilt

Bolstered by the return of two regulars who had been on the sidelines with injuries, a determined squad of American University players buckled down to the serious business of preparing a warm reception for St. John's of Annapolis, which will visit the Eagles' cerie Saturday.

American has never defeated the Bay City eleven in football, but Coach Walter Young and his men are confident that this is their year. They are almost too confident when you consider that the Johnnies have played three games and won two, one a victory over Randolph-Macon, which had gone undefeated since 1934.

Kimber Shoop, veteran tackle, and "Peanut" Howard, punter, halfback, are the crippled men back in the line-up. Howard probably will replace Hansborough at halfback, while Shoop will team with Stintik at tackle. Capt. Joe Caw has been shifted from tackle to guard.

Kaufman, Tiger's Star, Signs as Pro

New York, Oct. 13 (AP)—Charles (Chuck) Kaufman, halfback, last year on Princeton's undefeated eleven, today turned professional, the first "big three" player to join the ranks of the money stars.

Kaufman was signed by the New York Yankees in the newly organized American League and will make his first appearance tomorrow night against the Brooklyn Tigers at Randall's Island.

$2,500,000 Race Track Is Plan at Agua Caliente

Los Angeles, Oct. 13 (AP)—Samuel Seymour, retired capitalist, announced plans today to reopen the race track at Agua Caliente, Mexico, on Thanksgiving Day. The $2,500,000 plan for new buildings and improvements.

Seymour, formerly of Detroit, said he had received assurance that the Mexican government, in a pari-mutuel betting will be lifted. He did not give the source of his assurance.

NORTHWEST PRACTICES

The Northwest A. C. will practice tonight at 7 p. m., meeting at Sixteenth and U streets. Phil Porter, one of the team's mainstays, will be out for the reason as a result of a broken knee suffered in last week's game with the Tacoma Fire Department.

Local Goat Who Made Good Returns as Navy's Mascot

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 13.—Bill will be "going home" when the Navy meets Yale Saturday in Baltimore. And, Bill, the Navy's tough goat mascot, will be going home as the "local boy who made good."

In 1934, the Navy found him roaming the Baltimore stockyards, a forlorn vagabond who had hitch-hiked his way from the West with a load of cattle. Cattleboys adorned his whiskers and his only recommendation was his undeniable toughness.

Now, his whiskers are combed, his spreading horns painted blue and gold, his hooves oiled and his long white hair well washed and combed. And he wears a blue Navy blanket, decorated with "N's" and stars.

Bill got his chance when his predecessor had to be destroyed because of age. The Navy tried old Bill's son as mascot, but found him entirely too friendly.

In his first year as mascot, Bill brought Navy eight victories—topped by a 3-0 triumph over the Army.

Copyreader Wins Post Golf; Faints; So Does His Rival

George S. ("Simplepus") Clark, a copy reader, yesterday diverted his efforts from running copy to winning the Washington Post championship from Tom Middleton, a linotype operator, 1 up—at the end of a three-hole match. Both finalists collapsed at the end of the third hole, forcing the curtailment.

It is reliably reported that Middleton collapsed from surprise when Clark hit the ball after only three wild swings on the putting green.

"This course is not as tough as it looks," Clark insisted when he finally connected with the putt. Clark is reported to have been stricken when he learned that Middleton was counting his strokes. Clark's breakdown is believed to have been a ruse.

At a late hour last night the victor could not be located for verification of his medal score, which, it is rumored, was in the neighborhood of 94—on each hole.

4 Marks Menaced In Pin Matches

Four season's league records almost toppled in the Columbia Heights Men's League at the Arcadia last night. Howard Parsons, rolling for Arcadia, banged out a 152, the second-high game in the league this season.

Miss Wege captured the high game in the Lutheran Church Ladies League with 123. Mrs. Milner had high set with 326 and Georgetown scored the high game and set with 321 and 1,429.

Baton Rouge, La., Oct. 13 (AP)—Jack Torrance, holder of the world's shot-put record and former all-around athlete at Louisiana State University, has begun training for his debut as a professional fighter.

Returning from the East, where he signed a contract with Mike Jacobs, fight promoter, the big fellow has started gymnasium and road work.

Torrance is working under the eye of Herb Brodie, his manager. Brodie says he will be "a boxer, not just a fighter." Torrance is sparring with Willard Brown, fast welterweight.

Brodie reported that Torrance, who scaled 320, has dropped 30 pounds.

One Change in Pitt's Line-up for Duquesne

Pittsburgh, Oct. 13 (AP)—Jock Sutherland intends to start the same line-up against Duquesne Saturday that, with one exception, took the field against Ohio State at Columbus last week.

The exception will be that Al Lezouski may be at quarterback. Lezouski is an expert punter.

Notre Dame Gridders Drill on Pass Defense

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 13 (AP)—Coach Elmer Layden sent his Notre Dame football squad through an extra long drill today with particular attention being paid to pass defense. Steve Miller, fullback, hurt in the Washington game Saturday, went to Chicago today where an examination by an eye specialist showed no ill effects from the bad cut over his right eye.

Hoyas Anxious To Win Over Bucknell

Bisons Have Taken Pair of Heart-Breakers in Series Between Two.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

If you're looking for one reason why Georgetown is overanxious to whip Bucknell Saturday at Griffith Stadium, Jack Hagerty, the Hilltoppers' coach, can name at least three—and three good ones.

First of all, delving back into musty files for a bit of ancient history, there is that little incident of 1925 when Bucknell nosed out the Hoyas, 3-2, on a sea of mud in one of the bitterest football struggles of Hagerty's college career. He captained Georgetown that year and until they locked horns with the Bisons in that memorable fray, the Hoyas were undefeated, having bowled over Centre, Detroit, Lehigh, Mount St. Mary's, and Fordham, among others.

Then, progressing down the historical trail, it was in 1932 that Jack had the displeasure of meeting Bucknell again, this time as coach. He succeeded Tommy Mills in mid-season, directing Georgetown in its last three games, the second against Bucknell. The Blue and Gray scored late in the third period, assuming a 6-0 lead, which it held until the last minute of play, when Bernie Shimmings dropped back to punt for Georgetown and fumbled on his own 3-yard line.

Has Strong Line.

Bucknell recovered and promptly plunged the remaining distance to the goal line for the tying touchdown. That was a heart-breaker, but it will be even worse if the Pennsylvanians should win over Georgetown Saturday, marring its unblemished record and blighting its season before it is fairly well under way.

Georgetown is on the short end in its nine-game series with the Bisons, having won three games, lost five and tied one. Its last defeat came in a 78-0 shellacking served the visitors in 1916—by one of the great teams in Georgetown history. That team won all of its games that season after dropping a victory battle to Navy in its debut, 13-7.

The current Bucknell team is modeled after its more famous predecessors, having a strong, heavy line, one big back and three pony backs. The line will average 192 pounds from stem to stern, out-weighting Georgetown by some 9 pounds per man. Stuart Smith, a 200-pounder, is the big fellow in the backfield and a line-cracker of unusual talent who should worry the home team considerably.

"Mush" Dubofsky, one of Hagerty's lieutenants, Bucknell's coach, last week reports the team weak on passes and this attack will be featured Saturday. It was a 59-yard run that scored Miami's winning touchdown against the Bisons, and Hagerty is prone to do the same thing.

Pixlee Develops 'All-Trades' Squad

"Salty" Saturelli, the only lad who stepped forth when Pixlee asked his centers to take a pace forward opening day at Camp Letts, now plays tackle in a pinch and does a surprisingly good job of it. Ray Hanken, center, also has blossomed into one of the best ends ever to come under Pixlee's direction. On the other hand, Herb Reeves started out as an end and is finishing up as a fullback.

Yesterday the Colonials devoted all of their time to passes, throwing them and trying to stop them, and word was passed around that the Razorback halfback, when on the defensive, for he is the Westerners' greatest threat in this respect.

Here are some of his outstanding '35 performances: Caught five passes in the Rice game and scored Arkansas' only touchdown; was the team's leading ground gainer against Baylor; scored Arkansas' lone touchdown against Louisiana State; scored the winning touchdown against Texas A. and M. and also Tulsa; scored two touchdowns on passes against College of the Ozarks; otherwise distinguished himself with a ripping defensive game all season.

Ceremonies Planned.

If the football game is half as good as the ceremonies that go with it, it should be a corker. The George Washington Rouser Club will perform on a field between halves in conjunction with the band. The demonstration will be more or less in honor of the visitors. The Arkansas State Society, incidentally, has completely sold out the special section reserved for it and is clamoring for more tickets.

Vandy-Mustang Tilt a Family Struggle

By the United Press.

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 12.—A father will be fighting against his son, and a teacher will match wits against a former pupil when Vanderbilt University's Commodores meet the Southern Methodist Mustangs on the football field here Saturday. For divided loyalty this game is tops.

Ray Morrison, the Vanderbilt coach, is the man who will be trying to figure ways to stop his son, Jack Morrison, from going places with the ball, and at the same time he will be trying to outguess Matty Bell, his one-time assistant, who will direct the Mustangs from the opposite bench.

The presence of Morrison on the football field here Saturday. For divided loyalty this game is tops.

Back with virtually the same team, having lost only one man by graduation, De Paul figures to give another brisk set-to if it doesn't win. A 9-8 loss to Illinois, followed by 7-0 victories over St. Louis University and Dayton, has the Midwesterners on edge and they will be striving to repeat Saturday. Their only loss was Max Fiske, who, incidentally is playing with a couple of C. U. boys. Ed Marpoand Bill Lajousky, at Pittsburgh, and his place is being filled by Walter Hehn, a reputedly better and stronger man.

Catholic will be bolstered by the addition of Ed Dunne and Freddy Rogers, both ends, who were on the sidelines last week with injuries. Rogers is expected to be in the starting line-up, replacing Zeke Brown at end, while Dunne will relieve Capt. Hermie Schmar at the other flank.

Bergman was particularly pleased by Charley Munhall's work in the La Salle game and indicated that the Pittsburgh powerhouse will work long and often in the future. The boy is winning a reputation as the squad's best defensive back and by scoring against the Explorers has gained a ranking among the East's high scorers.

Strong northerly winds prevented much successful fishing Saturday afternoon and early Sunday morning. However, at noon Sunday the wind moderated and most anglers went to their respective fishing grounds and fished until dark with good results with the exception of blue fish. For some unknown reason anglers refrain from making their trip a whole day, usually picking up anchor about 5 p. m. This is a mistake because in another hour or two more fish are caught than in the preceding ten hours.

Fishing in company with Jerry Feasted, of the Security Exchange Commission, and Dr. Dana L. Greene, we "chummed" on S. W. Middle one hour before sundown on Sunday without a strike. Just as the big ball of fire dropped below the horizon "wham" went Doc's reel, which was immediately followed by two successive strikes to Jerry and the writer. This was happening on the change of the tide and in 30 minutes we had 15 blue fish in the ice box. The fish stopped biting as quickly as they had begun and our day was finished for blue fish. Never have we seen a tide change so quickly. Trout and spots are very plentiful on N. W. Middle. We watched other anglers landing these small fish three and four at a time on very small hooks. White perch are mixed in with these catches.

Our advice to anglers is to fish on the change of the tide for bluefish because they will not strike at any other time. Within two more weeks all the fish with the exception of rockfish will be gone and this column will close for the remainder of the season, with the exception of occasional articles on Florida and Southern water fishing for those that have the good fortune to make such delightful fishing trips.

Trotting is good now in most of the waters from Solomons Island south to the mouth of the Potomac. Rockfishing is getting better each day but the big ones have not yet made their appearance in sufficient large numbers to warrant an exclusive trip for them. Wait until the first frost and then go after them. They crave the cold water.

Reports from Piney Point indicate that fishing there is no different from that of other rockfishing grounds; mostly pan size with a few weighing up to 3 pounds. Occasionally a big one is picked up but they are in the minority.

One of the few anglers who had the intestinal fortitude to attempt to prosecute illegal netting in Baltimore today has met with one of the sorriest rewards from a boatman ever reported. This gentleman (name withheld on request) for having attempted to net, until the outcome of the boatman's trial) requested his boat captain to appear at the trial to identify the illegal netting. The boatman refused for various reasons, none of them worth publishing.

This same boatman has whined the loudest because of the netters spoiling both his fishing and that of his paid parties, but when approached to defend the principles against illegal fishing "laid down" on the man whom he suggested was best fitted to prosecute the violator of one of the cruelest laws ever sponsored by the State of Maryland. The gentleman called upon us to help him out of his last-minute predicament. We'll advise you of the outcome and the proceedings as they are handled and by whom.

We sincerely believe that the Maryland State conservation commission will punish those who violate fishing laws, but unless boatmen come forward and tell what they have actually seen in the matter of violations then all this talk about "why isn't something done to them chiselers" is going for naught as the fishing public is going to suffer in the end.

Here is an example of why boatmen who fish the public angler is capable of doing the opposite expected of him. Just yesterday we had one of the best boatmen on the bay tell us that recently he has seen large schools of bluefish breaking, but could not catch any of them because they simply refused the lure. He signaled a nearby netter who came over and threw his net around the entire school completely wiping it out of existence. What a cheap thing to do just because the fish refused to bite.

Flayed C. U. Gridmen Prepare for De Paul

Still haunted by memories of Saturday's nightmare with La Salle's Explorers, the warm-up team that almost knocked its host cold, Coach "Dutch" Bergman yesterday read the riot act to his Catholic University gridmen and he didn't stop at "Dutch." The boys were a trifle pinker than their scarlet jerseys when he finished and the effect of Bergman's little chat was reflected in the squad's brutal treatment of the practice equipment.

But it will be a vastly different team that faces De Paul this week-end in the Brookland bowl, for the Cards not only want to improve on last week's performance but to settle an old debt with the Blue Demons. Last year it was DePaul that scored Catholic's record with a 9-0-6 victory over the District aggregation at Chicago—the only black mark against Bergman's boys.

Back with virtually the same team, having lost only one man by graduation, De Paul figures to give another brisk set-to if it doesn't win. A 9-8 loss to Illinois, followed by 7-0 victories over St. Louis Uni-

Passing Attack To Mark Pro Tilt Sunday

A record-breaking passing combination will be on exhibition Sunday at Griffith Stadium where the Washington Pros meet the Alexandria Celtics in the first Dixie League game played here this season, and if past performances are a criterion they may come through with a league mark. Dick Nelson, passer of excellence, and Willis Benner, receiver, are the pair and they will wear the Black and Gold of the Pros.

They first broke into print—real black print—against Duke in their last year at Maryland, 1933, scoring the first touchdown made against the Blue Devils that season. With the ball on the 22-yard line Nelson heaved a short pass to Benner who caught the ball on the 33, almost wholly surrounded by Duke's secondary. How he escaped from that ring Benner can't tell, but he got into the clear and sprinted 67 yards for the score, presenting Maryland with a slim and short-lived lead.

Benner was an end at Maryland for two years, being converted into a back in his senior year, but since has performed only behind the line. Nelson, a full-looking individual who would hardly be suspected of being a gridman, is the key man of the Pros' attack. A triple-threat, he averages well over 50 yards on his punts, is a good ball carrier and an exceptional passer. Both will be much in evidence Sunday.

Popular prices will prevail for the game. Adults will be admitted for 55 cents and children under 12 for 25 cents.

Leto-Jadick Bout Heads Ring Card

Jimmy Leto and Johnny Jadick, two contenders for District Lightweight Champion Phil Furr, will headline the next fight card to be held at Turner's Arena next Monday night.

The week later, on October 26, District Lightweight Champion Howard Scott will engage California Joe Rivers, who fought two close and very thrilling bouts with Featherweight Champion Pete Saron, in the feature bout.

All the bouts are scheduled for ten rounds.

Evening Race at Wills Large Sport Feature by Neck

Merrywood, Outsider, Falers

Finishes Second After Setting Pace; 8,000 See Day's Sport.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.
Laurel, Md., Oct. 13.—Making her first start here after a summer campaign in the North, E. D. Shaffer's Evening Tide scored a neck decision in the Rodgers Forge Purse, feature race of today's program and a test for juveniles over the 6-furlong course.
Merrywood, a long shot from the barn of L. J. Marks, was second with another neck advantage over uneasy, owned by Mrs. Emil Denemark and coupled with the winner in the betting. The chief disappointment was the showing of E. R. Bradley's Biologist, one that was backed into odds-on favoritism. Biologist had excuses, however, being caught in between horses at the far turn.
Evening Tide, in winning her third race of the year, paid a $620 mutuel and ran the three-quarters in 1:12 4-5 over the fast track.

Merrywood Is Throat.

The main struggle was between Evening Tide and Merrywood from the beginning. The former was first to show in front but was soon joined by Merrywood and the pair fought a merry battle from there to the wire. Jockey Kurtinager, who had charge by rating her along with the rushed Merrywood. The latter lacked punch when the final test came. Uneasy moved up as if to menace entering the stretch and closed well but too late for a higher place in the pay-off.

Careful Miss, the property of W. Elliott, scored a smashing victory in a 5-furlong dash for juvenile fillies which opened the program. With Jockey J. O'Malley in the saddle, the Chatterbox held a head decision over Savage Beauty, who was ridden by E. R. Bradley. The latter was second, while the third place was won by a picture of the finish, for some reason or other.

Staraway, the favorite, went to the front, followed by Careful Miss, and the pair ran until they were late in the stretch, where Staraway was edged by Careful Miss then took up the front running and under good handling barely lost. She paid a $230 mutuel and ran the route in 1:13 4-5.

In a thrilling four-nose finish, the favored Lee Lafoon was declared the winner at the end of a 14-mile contest for cheap platters. It was the closest finish of the meeting, but the judges did not hesitate after consulting the negative, and placed Rollick, owned by E. R. Bradley, with Dearnish and Sun Abbot fourth.

Lee Lafoon, owned by H. Sokol, overcame a world of trouble in the running to come out on top under the excellent handling of Silvio Cocchi. He paid a $450 mutuel and was clocked in 2:08.
The Boman Stable's Beth Bon was lashed to take a neck decision from Mrs. Emil Denemark's Chief Cherokee in the fifth race, with Mrs. A. A. Abbott's Dancing Doll, the favorite, third in the victory. The latter, third in the vest-pocket race, was under the excellent handling of Silvio Cocchi. He paid a $450 mutuel and was clocked in 2:08.

The sixth race went to S. S. Sand's Hollyhook by a length over Mrs. E. Denemark's Knight's Fancy. Thirteen Stars closed fast to be third, a head away. Sir Windor, who started at the pace, and Apprentice Jockey Tucker brought Hollyhook around the leas, to win going away, running the mile and 70 yards in 1:42 5-8. The filly paid a $7 mutuel.

Time Out!

Laurel Race Track, Md., Oct. 13, 1936.

Dear Al:
In this game where superstitions and weird systems fill many minds, it is hard to find something new. However, the Benningses have always come through at some time or another and it remained for one to be strictly original. Yes, "E. K." gives us a brand-new one. He plays certain horses when the wind is blowing and certain horses when the air is still. He keeps a little book on the thing and consults it before each wager. Knowing horse players as I believe you do, this fellow seems to be on the level. I suspect he is the Weather Bureau each morning to determine the wind velocity. Perhaps we can rig up a little sail on Canine Lass and blow her home tomorrow. Probably it was an ill wind that was stopping some of our selections today. Today's third race was a most tipped affair and the meeting but no one could be located who had the word on Chambersburger. Wonder when they are going to turn those Bradley horses loose for their annual cleanup. The photo on that Lee Lafoon finally really showed the four horses in the order called by the judges.

First race—Lady Carrot ran a good race last out, losing by a narrow margin after showing a game effort. She appears to have found a spot and I shall string along. Pummel Stone figure to be close here. Fowl gave me the impression that a surprise might be in the offing in that recent outing. Bengay may be right, but I'm waiting for maiden company.

Second race—Inflee seems well placed in this bet. She is slated to draw DeCamillas for the saddle and I shall string along. Pummel Stone figure to be close here. Fowl gave me the impression that a surprise might be in the offing in that recent outing. Bengay may be right, but I'm waiting for maiden company.

Third race—Makalaw gets away from bulky field in this race and may show a return to winning stride. Irrespressible, from the Vanderbilt barn, is speedy and promising. He is ridden by the best jockey in the country, Silvio Cocchi, and there is reason to believe that he is better than generally rated. Conquer and Amperand are possible.

Fourth race—Mr. Canon has worked excellently and had little chance in his last competitive appearance. This is another DeCamillas mount and looks as if the price should be right. Angry Saxon has been rested and is ready to show a good effort. Offender for the minor award.

Fifth race—Canine Lass, one of the fastest workers of the grounds, probably needed that last. Gets in a small field here and breaks off the rail. She will have to be moving them up. Silvery Cloud is the one to beat. First Pigeon, a winner at the "Grav" to take care of the others.

Sixth race—Makalaw gets away from bulky field in this race and may show a return to winning stride. Irrespressible, from the Vanderbilt barn, is speedy and promising. He is ridden by the best jockey in the country, Silvio Cocchi, and there is reason to believe that he is better than generally rated. Conquer and Amperand are possible.

Seventh race—Seven Star appears headed for a set of brackets in this company. Miss Jones can do better if not rushed during the early stages. Zany Light is as fit as that good last race.

Best bet—Canine Lass.
1—Chief Holies, Lady Carrot, Exaggeration.
2—Silvery Cloud, First Pigeon, Tempo.
3—Exaggeration, Makalaw, Tiaman.
4—Offender, Tenfold, Slam.
5—Canine Lass, Lady Carrot, Exaggeration.
6—Jimmie Cabanis, Wise Sister, Calumet Dick.
7—Seven Star, Rudenia, Julia Flight.
8—Best bet—Seven Star.
9—Clocker Mike.

Unemployment In U. S. Reaches Recovery Low

11,427,000 in August Is 5,547,000 Below Peak of March, 1933.

New York, Oct. 13.—The number of persons unemployed in the United States declined in August for the seventh consecutive month to another new low for the current business recovery movement, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

The number employed in August was 39,822,000 as against 39,341,000 in July and 37,744,000 in August last year. At the low point of the depression in March, 1933, 55,369,000 persons were employed.

Thus, 6,943,000 persons have found work since that time. This increase in employment has not been accompanied by a corresponding decrease in unemployment since the gain in population has far outstripped the gain in the supply of workers since the low for the depression.

Lumber Shipments 74 Per Cent of 1929

The lumber industry during the week ended October 3 stood at 69 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 74 per cent of 1929 shipments. Shipments continued heavy, being only 1 per cent below the preceding week, the heaviest of any week of the year to date.

Reported national production during the week ended October 3 of 7 per cent fewer mills was 3 per cent below revised production figures of the preceding week and shipments and new orders were both 4 per cent below that week, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association.

ANSWER TO YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE

Fire Hall Cornerstone Gives Up Old Papers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 13.—Copies of two old newspapers, the Winchester News and the Winchester Times, a roster of officers and members, a roster of the city council and of the pastors of the city, and a yellowed envelope on which was drawn the square and compass emblem of the Masonic Fraternity, were found when the cornerstone of the old Sarah Zane fire hall was opened, it was learned today.

The building, the cornerstone of which was laid June 28, 1878, is being replaced by a modern structure, and material in the old cornerstone is to be replaced in the new building.

The two cornerstones will be laid at a special ceremony to be held this fall. It is hoped to expedite construction of the building so that the fire equipment, now being housed in temporary quarters, may be returned to headquarters.

Index to Urban, Farmer Income Sought by AAA

Experts Hunting Yardstick for New Goal Face Complex Search.

By Robert C. Albright.

The gargantuan task of revising all basic Federal data on farms to erect a foundation for the Administration's new farm program guidepost—a parity income index—is under way at the Agriculture Department, it was learned last night.

Revision of statistics and statistical methods in use for years, and exploration of new methods of measuring farm and urban income, and comparing the two, are involved in the study. Experts of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics and the AAA are co-operating in the survey, which will not be completed until 1937.

The immediate object of this sweeping statistical search is a figure that will show clearly from month to month the purchasing power per person in agriculture living on farms, compared with the purchasing power of city dwellers or persons not living on farms.

Parity in income between farm and urban groups is the latest objective of AAA, which has abandoned its old goal of parity prices. In a nutshell, the experts are seeking an index figure to guide them in reaching the new objective, and, once they have got it, it will be known as a "parity income index."

Task Difficult.

Sounds simple enough, but AAA officials say a re-examination of all old farm statistical tables, revamping old methods and improving their accuracy, as well as additional farm income yardsticks, must be ferreted out before the job is complete.

Parity prices for farmers was the AAA farm goal in 1933, but officials say now the objective should be broader. The parity price index, followed for years, roughly showed the relationship of prices a farmer received for his products to the prices he had to pay for the goods he used. With the aid of the drought that goal virtually has been reached.

For two successive months, high farm prices have maintained the price index at 98. Parity is 100. When the soil conservation act was framed, AAA chieftains decided on the broader farm income index, and the program to bring farm and city income to their prewar balance. They have been searching for the index ever since, virtually snowed under the statistical complexities involved.

According to Louis H. Bean, AAA economic adviser, who is co-operating with O. C. Stine, of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics and his staff in the study, the experts must first redefine the persons living on farms, redetermine their net income and the things they buy with that income. Vice versa, they must define the persons not living on farms, what is their income and what they can buy with it.

Recheck Output Figures.

Farm production figures must be rechecked and brought down to date, and probably changes made in the methods of estimating farm income from production. New knowledge is being sought on farm income from sources other than production, and new basic data on the long-time changes in the income of persons not on farms.

Once this information has been obtained and digested, the department will build its new index upon it, and chart its farm program accordingly, say the experts.

In their own words, "the relative per capita purchasing power per person not on farms" will be considered the measure of income parity for agriculture, just as the index of prices paid by farmers has been used as a measure of price parity.

And the ratio of agricultural per capita purchasing power to this urban income parity standard will be used as a measure of the progress agriculture makes from season to season in keeping pace with the living standards of the rest of the population.

J. W. Anderson, 58, Dead in Accotink

J. W. Anderson, 58, of Accotink, Va., fell dead yesterday afternoon in the garden of his home. His wife, who saw him fall, summoned Dr. William P. Caton, who pronounced him dead.

Mr. Anderson, a native of Accotink, was one of the first guards to be employed at the District Reformatory at Lorton. For the last 20 years he had been engaged in the garage business at Accotink, retiring about two years ago. He was prominent in local and county politics, serving as a member of the county Democratic executive committee for several years. He was a member of Accotink Lodge of Odd Fellows and the Alexandria Elks Club.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lottie Anderson; a son, Wm. Anderson, of Accotink; a daughter, Mrs. Audrey Gensch, of Manila, P. I., and two sisters, Mrs. Lula Donahue and Mrs. Julia Riley, both of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow in Pohick Episcopal Church, with the Rev. C. A. Langston conducting. Burial will be in the Pohick Cemetery.

Thomas Dixon Urges Gov. Landon's Election

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 13 (AP).—Thomas Dixon, author, describing himself as "full of heat and pizen," made his "first political speech in 30 years" here tonight and called for the selection of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas.

The 72-year-old novelist, who wrote "The Clansman," and from whose works "The Birth of a Nation" was filmed, said he was not appearing as a Republican, but as "a Democrat with a rebel yell still rising from my throat."

"I've looked in vain for a Democratic candidate for the Presidency," he added. "I bring you a challenge tonight to find me a Democratic Party."

Adventist Missionary Tells Of Reforms of Savage Rituals

In the tranquil atmosphere of the Seventh Day Adventist headquarters at Takoma Park, Md., missionaries yesterday talked of the weird burial rights of the savages of the Zambesi River section of Africa and of the accomplishments of their colleague, the Rev. B. W. Abney, in spreading the Gospel on the "Dark Continent."

"Half-dressed women, covered with ashes, throw themselves upon the grave of the dead," wrote Mr. Abney, "and then large groups of men with spears and guns run with all speed and fire their guns to drive the spirits away from the grave."

"Two cows are slaughtered near the grave so that the animals may go on with the spirit of the dead person into the spirit world. It was one of the most pitiable scenes I have ever witnessed."

In his report to the foreign missions board of the denomination Mr. Abney outlined results of a 2,000-mile tour through northern and southern Rhodesia. Enthusiastically he wrote:

"The power of the Gospel is being felt in Africa, where as many as 10,000 natives attended a single camp meeting. Inside of four weeks at our Rwanikeri Mission a total of 2,000 heathens were converted to Christianity."

Physical as well as spiritual advantages are bestowed upon the converts, Mr. Abney related.

"The huts of those who have not been converted to the Gospel are smutty and black because they have no chimney or windows and smoke remains inside until it slowly seeps out through the grass roof. After accepting Christianity the natives learn a more sanitary and hygienic way to live."

"In a village where the light of the Gospel has penetrated, there is a noticeable change in the appearance and arrangement of the huts. Converts wear clothing, while heathens have little or none. The custom of slaying an ox when a child dies is discontinued when Christianity is accepted, and instead, an ox is sold and the money used for the purchase of books with which to improve mentality."

Chinese Soldiers Held Buried Alive

Lanchow, China, Oct. 13 (AP).—Invading Communists buried alive a government army detachment in retaliation for killing more than 100 of their followers, advices from the district southeast of Lanchow said today.

The government troops ambushed the Communists, but later were overpowered, the report said. The Communists were reported to have abandoned their six-week siege of several southern cities due to the strength of the defenders and were driving toward the northeast.

Numerous wealthy Chinese committed suicide to avoid possible capture for ransom, the advices declared. The danger of an assault on Lanchow had lessened, although food supplies were running low. American missionaries who sought refuge here were leaving for southern Shensi Province.
